'Tinder Dry' in Woods

The fire hazard is high and approaching extreme on Southern Vancouver Island, the B.C. Forest Service reported as temperatures Thursday passed the record for that date.

While campfires haven't been banned, a spokesman said "anyone going into the woods should use extreme caution. It's tinder dry."

The hot weather is expected to continue over the weekend, but ease off slightly from Thursday's 85 degrees.

Previous record high for Sept. 19 was set in 1952, when the temperature hit 81.

Several small fires have been contained including two acres on Mount McDonald and two to three acres at national defence property at Pedder Bay.

A few hot spots are still being detected at the scene of the earlier Mount Finlayson fire.

Slash burning started by Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber in the Sooke area now is being mopped up. A forest service spokesman said there is no ban on slash burning.

Spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America said logging operations are normal in the Port Alberni area. In the Duncan area, some loggers are working half shifts but others full shifts depending on local conditions.

A two-acre fire in a remote area of Mount Douglas was contained Thursday by Saanich firefighters but a 12-man crew remained at the scene until dark. It stopped just short of heavy timber.

A forest fire on the United States side of Vedder Mountain, in the Fraser Valley, roared out of control Thursday night as winds up to 40 miles an hour whipped flames. It covered up to 200 acres.

Williams Changes Mind

Resources Minister Bob Williams said today he now has "an open mind" on B.C. government support for the 1980 Winter Olympics bid.

The province originally turned down a request for support in the bid by the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee but Williams said an announcement of new support by the federal government has "significantly changed" the situation.

Welfare Row Sees Basford, Mayors Balk

British Columbia municipalities are balking at having to pay $10 million because of the province's $100 million welfare blunder this year and Federal Revenue Minister Ron Basford says that Ottawa wants a full explanation of the situation before it pays a 50 per cent share of the tab.

"We'll be wanting an explanation before we shell out $50 million of the taxpayers' money," Basford said in Vancouver Thursday.

He termed the mistake an "amazing situation" and said the federal government would be interested in seeing provincial welfare records before handing over any money.

Several municipalities have already stated bluntly that they will not pay their share.

Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said the Municipal Act itself prevents municipalities from making any unbudgeted payments.

At the Union of British Columbia municipalities' meeting in Vernon Thursday, the mayors of Coldstream, Penticton, Vernon and Harrison Hot Springs also said they will resist any efforts to obtain money from their councils.

The 600 delegates attending the annual convention voted almost unanimously Thursday to seek a meeting with Premier Barrett and Human Resources Minister Norm Levi to discuss welfare costs.

Alderman Jack Gilmore of Coquitlam, brother of Education Minister Eileen Dailly, was one of the three dissenting delegates.

He called criticism of the government for the miscalculation premature.

Municipalities have been informed that their assessment for welfare costs has been increased to $1.05 per capita from 85 cents.

Municipalities pay 10 per cent of welfare costs, the provincial government pays 40 per cent and the federal government pays 50 per cent.

Premier Barrett has said the municipalities will have to pay their share of the added expenses caused by what he calls an error in budgeting.

Ald. Gilmore said municipalities complaining about high assessments for welfare should remember that under the Social Credit government they were assessed 20 per cent of welfare costs or $1.25 per capita.

Municipalities should also remember that welfare recipients are affected by inflation, he added.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said he expects to discuss the overspending on welfare with Barrett Monday. He wouldn't comment further on the miscalculation, saying that he only knows what he reads in the newspapers and they aren't always correct.

Socred MLA Alex Fraser, chairman of the public accounts committee of the legislature, said there is every likelihood the committee will investigate the overexpenditure.

Fraser (Cariboo) who is attending the UBCM meeting, said he has already contacted some of the committee members and they felt it "imperative that we look into this matter as soon as possible."

The former Quesnel mayor said it is his personal feeling that the committee must first find out how the overexpenditure occurred, why it occurred, discover the total amounts involved and look into Premier Barrett's statement that it was a clerical error.

Prices Jump In U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) Consumer prices shot up 1.3 per cent in August — a month when prices normally fall — and the real spending power of the average American worker with a family hit its lowest since December of 1970, the labor department reported Friday.

The leap in retail prices, which works out to an adjusted annual rate of 15.6 per cent, was foreshadowed by near-record wholesale price increases in the last two months.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO said the picture was even worse. He said the average worker's real earnings had fallen to the 1965 level, rather than that of 1970, and added: "This thing (inflation) is obviously gaining momentum at a frightening rate."

Faetors leading the over-all price increase included higher costs for mortgage interest, clothes, meats and medical services.

. . . LESS STEAK, CHAMPAGNE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. presidential economic adviser Alan Greenspan told a group including many representatives of the poor Thursday that the people who are being hurt worse by inflation are Wall Street stockbrokers.

His remark brought catcalls, jeering and an emotional appeal for his resignation.

While painting a gloomy picture of economic stagnation through mid-1975, Greenspan said in response to a question: "Everybody is hurt by inflation. If you wanted to examine who percentagewise is hurt the most, in their incomes, it's Wall Street stockbrokers. I mean their incomes have gone down the most."

Some members of the audience of 500 persons attending one of the Ford administration's series of economic conferences at the department of health, education and welfare booed and jeered the remark by Greenspan, new chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

"That's the whole trouble with the administration Wall Street Brokers," shouted an unidentified member of the audience.

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference demanded Greenspan's resignation.

"To equate the plight of Wall Street financiers who may have to eat less steak and sip less champagne with the plight of the poor forced to eat dog food, and soon may have to eat the dog, is to state to this nation and to the world that we consider the poor expendable," the SCLC director said. Storm Kills Hundreds

BELIZE CITY, Belize (UPI) — Hurricane Fifi rammed into Central America Thursday and drenched five countries, killing hundreds of persons in floods and tides whipped by winds of up to 130 miles an hour.

The storm wiped out millions of dollars of crops, particularly bananas and rice, as it tore up fertile farmland.

It left an estimated 200 persons dead in Honduras, where it was the worst storm to hit the northern part of that country in this century. Its wind and rains drenched a third of the nation and lashed neighboring Nicaragua, where authorities reported one child drowned.

Heavy rain and flood warnings were also reported in Guatemala and El Salvador, which felt the fringe of the storm.

Fifi slammed into Belize, formerly known as British Honduras, at Placentia village, 72 miles south of Belize City.

It ploughed inland into the heart of the banana country, ravaging the towns of Cow Pen, Mango Creek and Siene Blight.

The U.S. national hurricane centre in Miami said the storm would lose force as it moved inland at a speed of 10 m.p.h., but officials there warned it could pick up strength again if it reached the Pacific Ocean. They said the primary danger was flooding.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in Belize, as authorities had already ordered coastal residents to shelters in higher ground.

Agricultural officials wrote off as a complete loss the Belize $1 million banana crop that had been sold in advance to the British Ffyffes firm.

The loss in human life on the northern coast of Honduras was high. Officials in Teguigalpa, the Honduras capital, said 150 bodies had already been recovered — many of them school children. The total death toll in Honduras was expected to rise to 200, but storm casualty figures were being assembled slowly.

The entire Honduras coastal region was isolated because of heavy flooding which wiped out road and all other communication, including air service. Bridges were washed out and homes beside river banks swept away.

Girl's Death: Man, 19, Held

A third year student at the University of British Columbia has been arrested in connection with the death of a 24-year-old Sooke woman earlier this month in Abbotsford.

Michael Patrick Milko, 19, of Chilliwack, appeared in Matsqui provincial court this morning charged with manslaughter.

His arrest came three days after the body of Linda Marlene Dueck of R.R. 2 Sooke was found in tall grass and water in a ditch beside the road less than half a mile from the Abbotsford RCMP station.

The partly-clad body had been in the ditch about three weeks before it was found Tuesday morning by a man looking for beer bottles.

Police believe the girl had been hitchhiking from Hope over the Labor Day weekend when she was picked up by the killer.

An autopsy failed to disclose the cause of death.

Milko was a resident in Cariboo House on the university campus and was in his third year of zoology specializing in genetics.

A student in the next room to his described him as gregarious, though a "loud talker," agreeable, and a conscientious worker.

"He used to hang a sign on his door saying 'come in and have a talk whenever you feel like it,'" the fellow student said.

Thieving Mailman Jailed

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg postman who received about $20,000 in the last four years by selling parcels he was to deliver to a shopping centre was sentenced to three years in prison Thursday.

Hilbert Honkey, 47, pleaded guilty to the theft charge last month and was remanded for sentence by provincial Judge Anthony J. Pilutik. He had no previous criminal record.

Crown counsel Willaim Morton told the court that Honkey, who has lost his job after 22 years with the post office, made arrangements with a woman living in West Winnipeg to steal the parcels if she would sell them.

Court was told that Honkey received $100 each time he made an exchange with the woman. He did not open the packages but judged their value from the stores to which they were to be delivered. His route included Polo Park, the largest shopping centre in the city.

Honkey, a father of three, told the court he began stealing the parcaels to help pay the cost of medical treatment for his son.

Morton said it was almost impossible to estimate the total loss from the thefts. One business in the shopping centre almost went broke because of the losses, he said.

A woman is to appear in court in connection with the incidents.

Boy Leads Police In High-Speed Run

A 15-year-old juvenile was taken into custody following a 15-mile high-speed chase through Saanich early this morning.

Five police cars — two from Saanich, two from Victoria and one from Colwood RCMP — joined in the chase which ended on the Trans-Canada Highway at the start of the Malahat Drive.

Saanich police said they received a report of a stolen half-ton truck from the 3200 block Wascana at 2:20 a.m.

A patrolman spotted the vehicle 30 minutes later moving southbound on Interurban near Marigold.

When the driver refused to stop, police pursued at speeds up to 90 mph down Interurban to Burnside along Hampton to Wascana and onto the highway.

The spokesman said the truck went out of control a couple of times and weaved from one side of the road to the other, forcing some cars off the highway.

It was stopped at a roadblock opposite Hall's Rentals.

Minor damage was done to a police cruiser when the truck skidded into its rear end.

Drug Ring Found

NAPLES (Reuter) — Naples police said today they have uncovered an international drug-smuggling ring trafficking between the Middle East and Canada.

Seven people here have been arrested, one of them a 64-year-old suspected Mafia boss, Salvatore Zizzo.

FBI 'Break-ins'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted a number of "surreptitious entries" or break-ins during the Nixon administration, according to once-secret testimony before the Senate Watergate committee.

The testimony, by former White House counsel J. Fred Buzhardt, disputes an assertion by former president Richard Nixon that such FBI activities had ceased in 1966.

500 Civil Servants Get 10.4% Pay Hike

Salary increases of 10.4 per cent have been approved for about 500 senior public servants not included in B.C. Government Employees Union.

The increases, retroactive to April 1, were approved by cabinet last week and revised the salary schedules set out in April, 1973.

John Mochrie, research officer for the Public Service Commission, told The Times today the 10.4 per cent increase awarded the management classification "is not expected to influence" negotiations now in progress with the employees union.

He disclosed that the salary increases already negotiated by four of the 13 union components are "in excess" of the increase granted the management group.

The 500 people covered by the management classifications include deputy ministers, senior departmental officers, legal officers, directors, superintendents, school principals and a whole range of other positions named by statute.

Principals' salaries range from $1,670 per month to $1,913 per month.

NEWS BRIEFS

Firing Squad Death

MOSCOW (UPI) — A military court has sentenced to a firing squad a Russian who returned to the Soviet Union on a Canadian passport, the government newspaper Izvestia said today. The court found him guilty of war crimes.

The newspaper said George Tsinaridze, who held a Canadian passport under the name of David Geldiashvili, had participated in the deaths of more than 3000 persons in southern Russia when he was a member of a Gestapo squad in the city of Simferopol.

Lumber Layoffs Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Layoffs are continuing in the B.C. lumber industry with company officials laying the blame on a depressed lumber market.

Triangle Pacific Forest Products Ltd., said Thursday it is laying off 200 people as of Monday at its sawmill operation in Slocan in the southern B.C. interior.

Ontario Eggs Up

KEMPTVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ontario egg producers will be getting five cents a dozen more for their top three grades of eggs effective Monday, the Egg Marketing Board said Thursday.

Card-Carrying Pensioners Soon

OTTAWA (FP) — Standard identification cards may be available for Canada's old age pensioners by the end of the year.

Reports indicate the scheme could be passed by the Commons within two months although some officials caution it's unlikely to happen that soon.

The cards would serve as handy identification documents for men and women in the senior citizen category so they could readily take advantage of special reduced prices and other opportunities being offered to people over 65 by various levels of government, as well as by banks and other private organizations or agencies.

The cards would also qualify senior citizens for reduced fares or free travel on municipal or provincial public transit systems where the special benefits are already available.

Once the plan wins final endorsement from the health and welfare department, it's expected to move speedily through treasury board and the cabinet.

The only probable snag is a revival of the cries of "police state" which were first raised in 1957 when the Diefenbaker government attempted to introduce a uniform numbering system for all Canadians.

Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde has been meeting with provincial health ministers during a swing across the country this week and it's believed the ID card plan may be one of the points under discussion.

B.C. already operates a senior citizen identification program and issues cards to anyone over 65. A similar scheme is under active consideration by the Ontario government and could be adopted soon, if Parliament doesn't come out with a Canada-wide program first.

The federal program would differ from the one in B.C. in that only those who qualify for old age security benefits by meeting residency requirements would get the cards. In B.C., cards are given to all old enough to qualify.

CIA Chile Aim 'Democracy'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The activities of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in Chile were aimed at restoring democracy, not at overthrowing the government, says U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger.

He told the Senate foreign relations committee Thursday that the military overthrow of President Salvador Allende in 1973 was coincidental to the CIA program in Chile.

"Our concern was not a coup in 1973 but elections in 1976," Kissinger said of the spy agency' activities during Allende's three-year regime.

Kissinger added that Allende, after his election in 1970, was moving toward establishment of a "one-party government" and seeking "to throttle all the opposition parties and the opposition press." This was essentially the justification cited by President Ford at his Monday night press conference for covert U.S. activities against Allende.

Ford said such activities are common practice among world powers. He insisted the CIA had no role in the coup which toppled Allende.

As Kissinger was testifying, two senators, lacking the support of either President Ford or congressional leaders, were urging creation of a special committee to oversee all U.S. intelligence activities.

Sens. Howard H. Baker, (Rep.-Tenn.), and Lowell P. Weicker, (Rep.-Conn.,) with co-sponsors from both parties, Thursday urged creation of a 14-member congressional committee with jurisdiction over the Central Intelligence Agency, the FBI and other agencies involved in intelligence work.

Their idea clearly found little enthusiasm at a 90-minute meeting Thursday among President Ford and a group of congressional leaders of both parties.

The meeting was prompted by controversy over the CIA's backing of opposition newspapers and parties in Chile, against the Allende government.

During the three years of Allende's government all opposition parties and news media continued to function. The military junta which seized power on Sept. 11, 1973, banned all political parties closed Congress and shut down all opposition news media.

GOV'T SECURITIES RATES DROOPING

OTTAWA (CP) — It is too early to tell if a trend is in the works but interest rates as reflected in yields on government securities have turned downward.

At the weekly auction of treasury bills by the Bank of Canada the average yield for 91-day bills dipped below nine per cent for the first time since the third week in July.

The average rate for 182-day bills at the Thursday auction was a full one-quarter of a percentage point below the average of the previous Thursday.

The weekly Bank of Canada report charts a representative selection of short- and long-term government securities and all have turned downward.

But relief at the short end of the financing spectrum is good news.

The amount of money in short-term securities has bulged in recent months as interest rates have shot upward. Investors, unsure of prospects, have been reluctant to tie up money for long periods.

Government and corporate borrowers have been forced to make short-term loans while everyone waits for more stable conditions in capital markets.

The situation creates an acute problem for planners of large projects requiring long-term financing. Long-term financing now is expensive and planners are caught between the uncertainty of the short-term market and the cost of the long.

The shift towards short-term financing shows up in figures on federal government securities outstanding.

During the last 12 months the value of treasury bills outstanding — most are for terms of six months or less — has increased by $935 million to a total on Wednesday of $5.465 billion.

At the same time the amount of outstanding Canada Savings Bonds has declined by $1.271 billion to a total of $9.246 billion.

Savings bonds can be redeemed at any time but most issues have had terms to maturity of more than 10 years.

The balance of government bonds outstanding increased by $660 million during the 12-month period up to Wednesday to a total of $14.959 billion.

At the end of July the average term to maturity of these government bonds was four years and two months. This is the latest available figure on average term of long-term bonds and the average has been at about this level since mid-1973.

In June, 1972, the average term to maturity was four years, nine months and the average steadily declined to the mid-1973 level.

These figures are in sharp contrast to an average of seven years, seven months in 1966. During the last decade the average has dropped each year.

Bank of Canada officials are guarded in their comments about the drop Thursday in treasury bill rates.

FIVE FACE PORT HARDY RAPE CHARGE

Two juveniles and three young adults have been charged with raping a 16-year-old girl in Port Hardy Wednesday.

Gordon Sampson Walkus, 17, Michael Blair Shaw, 18, Maxwell Dennis Brown, 17, and two 15-year-old juveniles appeared in Port Hardy provincial court Thursday and were remanded to Oct. 3 for plea.

All accused are from the Port Hardy area.

The juveniles were released in custody of their parents; the other three were released after posting $1,000 bail each.

Another U.K. Bank on Brink

LONDON (UPI) — Another British bank floundered today and the government bailed out Rolls-Royce but refused to help Aston Martin. (See also election stories, Page 14.)

A subsidiary of the Lloyds bank group announced an attempt to rescue the British Bank of Commerce, one of Scotland's largest merchant banks, after a run on deposits.

The merchant bank's difficulties were typical of those which caused a crisis in the "fringe banks" early this year.

Its deposits have dropped from $96.6 million to $57.5 million and its share price has tumbled from a high last year of $2.97 to 30 cents Thursday.

"No small merchant bank can survive in the present economic climate without some help," said a spokesman for a firm involved in the rescue operation.

Industry Minister Anthony Wedgwood Benn mounted his own rescue operation Thursday for Rolls-Royce's aircraft engines division. He announced a government loan of $92 million to help it develop a new engine.

His action, safeguarding thousands of jobs, came after a firm order from Saudi Arabia had demonstrated the export potential of the RB 211-524 engine, a larger version of the power plant used in Lockheed Tristar jet liners.

Alderman Broke Window

KELOWNA (CP) — North Vancouver alderman Joan Gadsby was convicted of public mischief Thursday in provincial court and fined $25.

Judge R. J. Moir also ordered Ald. Gadsby to pay $107.81 restitution after she admitted to willfully breaking a glass door Wednesday night at Kelowna airport.

Court was told the alderman became angry with airport officials after they refused to allow her to board a departing plane.

During the argument she struck her suitcase against a locked glass door and broke it.

Ald. Gadsby, who was returning from the Union of British Columbia Municipalities convention at Vernon, admitted consuming several drinks at a reception prior to the incident.

$1-a-Gallon Gas Forecast by 1980

Canadians have little reason to fear an energy shortage this winter, but the country's long-term supply picture could look grim unless there's a speedy resolution to the federal-provincial "tug-of-war" over resource revenues, Shell Canada Ltd. president William Daniel said today.

Daniel, in Victoria for a meeting of company chief executives, told reporters a "heavy blanket of uncertainty" cloaks the oil industry, and leaves it wondering whether the tax demands of Ottawa and the provinces will leave enough return on investment to finance major exploration projects such as the Alberta tar sands.

Daniel said a minimum of 10 years "lead time" is involved between planning and tapping new reserves of high-cost energy, and any slowdown caused by uncertainty will push the day further ahead when the oil is finally available.

Meanwhile, he said, Canadians will have to accept the fact that they face steadily increasing prices for oil and gasoline to fund continued exploration, with gasoline possibly reaching $1 gallon before the end of this decade.

Daniel said the company has $1 billion in assets but it faces an investment figure 10 times higher than that over the next 15 years up to 1990.

He said allegations of "corporate ripoff" can hardly be levelled at a company which, through 1973 and the first part of 1974, saw out of every dollar earned: 64 cents used in running the industry, 28 cents to all levels of government in royalties and taxes, and six of the remaing eight cents plowed back into the industry, with two cents going to shareholders.

There is "tremendous potential" for oil conservation measures, including better building insulation techniques and better utilization of aircraft, which could save 10 to 20 per cent on energy requirements, he claimed.

FIRST TRIP A DOWNER

TOFINO (CP) — A Seattle-based crab boat's maiden voyage ended abruptly a few miles off this Vancouver Island community Thursday after the crew ran a test-fill of a holding tank. A bulkhead collapsed in the New Aries and the craft sank stern-first. The five-man crew was rescued.

the weather

Several temperature records were broken Thursday afternoon over southwestern B.C. as a ridge of high pressure persists over the province. Latest indications show no immediate breakdown in the pattern. Hence most areas of B.C. can expect continuing fine weather for the next few days as well as record afternoon temperatures in some local cities.

TROUBLED BOSTON BUSING

Race Violence Forces School Closure

Times News Services

BOSTON — At least four students were hurt in scattered school bus stonings involving both blacks and whites Thursday and racial violence forced cancellation of classes at a white, middle-class high school today.

Attendance elsewhere continued to inch up from Wednesday's 75-per-cent level, school officials said.

Scores of policemen sat on doorstoops near South Boston high school, their riot helmets beside them.

No crowds gathered on the streets, the scene of violent demonstrations when the first school buses arrived under a court-ordered integration plan a week ago.

A school department spokesman said faculty members and administrators were to meet at Hyde Park high school today, and attempt to gather white and black students to talk out the problems that led to Thursday's violence.

The turmoil was brought on by an assault on a white girl by two black male students Wednesday, the spokesman said.

The fighting "exploded into the corridors," one teacher said, and into the schoolyard when buses were called in early to pick up the black students.

In other developments, a group of neo-Nazis was ushered out of the state "for their own protection" by police after they were involved in a confrontation in South Boston.

A Ku Klux Klan leader from Louisiana said his followers were recruiting members in Boston. City officials said they would oppose any Klan attempts to hold rallies.

In Chicago, meanwhile, 27,000 teachers voted overwhelmingly to strike Monday if wage demands aren't met by Sunday and police were called in at Freehold, N.J., as thousands of students walked out of classes in sympathy with teachers who balked at directing extracurricular activities without a new contract.

The teachers, who worked the first two weeks of the school year without a contract, voted 15,478-to-5,345 to refuse to report to schools Monday if an agreement has not been reached with the board of education by noon Sunday.

A strike would affect some 500,000 students in the second-largest city in the U.S.

Lebanon Crisis Seen Over Tough Gun Laws

United Press International

Lebanese president Suleiman Franjieh tried today to avert a cabinet crisis touched off by his move to disarm Palestinian guerrillas and right-wing political parties.

Franjieh called a series of meetings with Lebanon's leading politicians following the resignation of two cabinet ministers protesting the government's sweeping crackdown on private armies.

The domestic security council, headed by Interior Minister Bahij Takieddin, Thursday ordered the arrest of all persons carrying weapons in public. The ban was aimed at heading off clashes between guerrillas and rightist militia.

The Phalangist party, which was involved in bloody clashes with the guerrillas last July, ordered its members to abide by the new restrictions. The government said Palestinians are also expected to obey the order.

"We are confient guerrilla leaders do not want to violate the law, which will be applied to all Lebanese and non-Lebanese citizens," Takieddin said in Beirut.

Franjieh scheduled a morning meeting with former president Camille Hamoun, leader of the right-wing National Liberal Party, and Pierre Gemayel, head of the rightist Phalangists.

The president called a meeting later in the day with former premier Abdulla Al-Yafi, a prominent Moslem leader.

Economy Minister Nazih Bizri and Labor Minister Emile Rouhana Saqr resigned Thursday from the 22-member cabinet to protest the gun restrictions.

The security council, which includes senior army and police officers, authorized security forces to shoot armed persons who refuse to surrender.

It was not immediately known whether the new security regulations would have any impact on Palestine guerrilla conflicts with Israel or attempts to negotiate a Middle East peace settlement.

TRUE GRIT IN ADMISSION

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto psychiatrist says Prime Minister Trudeau and his wife Margaret (right) have done "a marvellous thing" for psychiatric patients by saying openly that Mrs. Trudeau is receiving psychiatric help for emotional stress.

"They have made it clear that emotional illness can be suffered by the young, the beautiful and the wealthy and it is nothing to be ashamed of," Dr. Mary McEwan said Thursday.

Dr. McEwan said emotional stress is suffered to some degree, at some time in life, by almost everybody.

She said that persons in the public eye are under special pressure to always appear pleasant, happy and efficient, and they are not allowed "to have ups and downs, blue days and cranky days."

She said the public develops an image of a public person and expects the person always to fit that image.

Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau told reporters this week that Mrs. Trudeau had entered hospital in Montreal 12 days ago for treatment of stress.

Up to the Watershed

The main issues in the British general election to be held October 10 are given by all three parties as inflation and unemployment, and there will be little disagreement on this point. Prime Minister Wilson has come out the most vigorously on these themes, however, to the point of aligning himself so closely with the trades unions that he claims his party to be the only one able to solve Britain's pressing industrial problems.

Perhaps it is, for he says that he "had Britain back to work" within three days of taking office last February, finding remedies for the "two million out of work or laid off, darkened streets, unheated shops and offices." These conditions, of course had resulted from the coal workers' strike, and resultant industrial slowdowns, although Mr. Wilson inclines to lay the whole blame on the Conservatives.

Mr. Wilson bought peace by giving the workers what they wanted, and breaking the previous government's attempt to hold a price-and-wage anti-inflation line. Regardless of the extent to which Mr. Heath had fumbled the situation, Mr. Wilson's solutions, both past and future, will not necessarily be to Britain's advantage even though they may temporarily benefit labor.

Mr. Wilson carries the idea a step further by referring to his "social contract" with the trade unions, maintaining that only the Labor Party can guarantee union co-operation in an orderly wages policy.

The prime minister's campaign approach makes it more obvious than ever before that the real election split in Britain is not so much political as social. When one segment of society asserts its power to make the nation's industry go or stop, and one political party claims that it is the only one that has influence with that segment, then orthodox political debate is superseded, and the campaign takes on a slight flavor of intimidation, if not of blackmail.

A government elected under such circumstances can survive and govern only through increasing assumption of powers. Continual bowing to the social segment which controls the government's election must lead to the segment's control of the government's actions if the government does not at some point assert a measure of independence. Where that segment is organized labor, with the power of the general strike, the ultimate answer seems clear.

Britain has not yet reached so clear-cut a dilemma, although the trend is apparent. But already the inevitable antithesis has thrown a shadow on the scene — the quickly denounced suggestions in some quarters to form righist vigilantes and other retaliatory groups.

This election could well provide a moment of truth in British democracy. It is fortunate that the country has centuries of moderation, reasonableness and good sense behind it. A lesser nation would be much worse off.

"... I can't understand it ... one glove off and still no takers ..."

The Hinges Are Creaky ...

It might be said the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is suffering from a Greek tragedy. Not only did Athens' military withdrawal from the organization leave a strategic gap, it also left a psychological rent in the alliance's fabric. Without Greek bases the U.S. Sixth Fleet is severely hampered in acting quickly if there is a Mid-East flare-up. Nor does the current mood of the Greek people, who remember United States support for the repressive Greek military dictatorship, suggest an early return to full NATO membership.

As world-wide inflation gathers speed many other member nations are considering defence cutbacks. The Netherlands has already cut its defence budget and Britain may be forced into a similar position. Even in the United States there will be renewed Congressional pressure to cut down on the 500,000 U.S. troops and dependents stationed in Western Europe, especially now that the U.S. has established diplomatic relations with East Germany. Added to these political and financial woes, Norway is under pressure from the Soviet Union to neutralize strategic Spitzbergen Island in the Arctic Ocean.

It would be easy to shrug off NATO as a relic from the cold war. Europe has been partitioned between East and West on a more or less permanent basis. Detente is a fact, albeit a tenuous one, as the superpowers grope towards limited disarmament. But even political doves admit that the Soviet is increasing its military forces at an alarming rate, while the U.S. armed forces are at a low point of a little over two million persons.

The Soviet Union's intentions are clouded. Are its augmented forces a reaction to increased civil rights pressure within the 15 Soviet republics or are the Russians building up their forces and biding their time? Only the Kremlin knows for sure. But NATO, recovering from a bout of internal dissension and faced with new political woes, is still the best instrument the West has to ensure that detente becomes more than a catch phrase. The hinges may be creaky but the door can still open and shut.

Earplugs for Bystanders

Driving a car has never been a placid occupation. It can be hazardous and frequently dangerous to life and limb. If your car doesn't hit a power pole or shoot off the road at a curve, some other motorist may rear-end your vehicle or dispute the right-of-way at an intersection with metal-rending results. Driving has caused numberless premature grey hairs, nervous tics and palpitations of the heart.

But brace yourself — now comes news that heavy traffic is not only tough on drivers, it may also be the cause of cancer in people who merely live close to well-travelled roads. A Swiss physician reports that of 75 cancer patients who died over a 12-year period, all but three lived within 50 yards of a busy highway.

The doctors also found that people living close to a highway carrying 5,000 vehicles a day were twice as likely to suffer headaches, insomnia, fatigue, depression, stomach trouble and nervousness as people living farther away.

Perhaps it's inconclusive evidence of a cause-and-effect relationship between noisy roads and cancer, as one American Cancer Society doctor suggests, but still it's scary enough to get out tape measure and earplugs and move the bed to the back of the house.

MAURICE WESTERN

A Consumer Among Producers

OTTAWA — Eugene Whelan, according to mid-week reports, has reversed himself on one aspect of marketing policy. Commenting on demands for consumer representation on marketing boards, the Minister of Agriculture is now quoted as saying: "It wouldn't make any difference to me."

As Mr. Whelan on other occasions when prodded, for example, by the Food Prices Review Board and by his colleague, Andre Ouellet, has taken spirited objection to such suggestions, this is clearly a concession. It does not appear, however, that the minister is particularly ardent in the quest for accommodations. On the contrary the evidence suggests that he has had little choice in the matter.

Summer Storm

It may have been Mr. Whelan's conviction in the beginning that the egg controversy was a summer storm which would quickly pass and be forgotten. Instead, and partly because so many involved persons have been impelled to justify themselves, it has continued to gather momentum.

The public outcry, provoked by the Plumptre criticisms and later revelations, had a political impact, breaching the unity of the cabinet. But this in turn created more troubles for the embattled minister and now, with Parliament about to convene, Mr. Whelan faces a new embarrassment in the shape of an early report, commissioned by the Canadian Consumer Council, which is said to recommend consumer representation on farm marketing boards.

This is not all. Mr. Ouellet, in his critical statement of September 4, said that he would be urging Cabinet "to support the appointment of user representatives in the marketing board system and to ensure that they have a real opportunity to influence the decision-making process."

The Cabinet, however, will have more to consider than the representations of

EUGENE WHELAN
. . . to his last breath

Mr. Ouellet because the Liberal party is strongest in precisely those urban areas which are particularly sensitive to the accusations brought against the egg marketing agency.

If the government does not move to implement this suggestion, an initiative will certainly be taken in Parliament by one of its own supporters.

Mr. Whelan's new willingness to accept consumer representatives on marketing boards may reflect not only his grasp of political realities but also a belated conviction that their presence would not make very much difference in actual policy. It remains his firm opinion that CEMA's price policies were correct and that it should be possible to avoid such errors as may have occurred by equipping the agency with a computer.

In the view of his critics, the change proposed would have at least one merit; it would endow the marketing system with an appearance of fairness which it cannot have when it is controlled exclusively by producers in the interests of producers.

Window Dressing

Whether the proposed more representative boards would mean a difference in practice is an important question. The answer presumably depends on the ability and character of the consumer representatives and essentially on their freedom and willingness to bring serious policy matters to public attention if they find themselves unable to influence their producer colleagues. If what is proposed is mere window dressing, one can see the force of Mr. Whelan's observation.

After the recent deluge of rotten egg statistics, however, window dressing will have very little public appeal. The upsurge of protest is directed against the policy which kept eggs out of consumption. Gestures are not likely to be very persuasive while Mr. Whelan misses no opportunity to affirm that he will defend the policy to his last breath.

Britain and the 'Tactical Vote'

LONDON — Tactical voting may turn out to be a phenomenon of major significance in the approaching British general election.

It is a factor that is being discussed with some dread by managers of the Labor and Conservative parties and with hope by managers of the Liberal and Nationalist parties.

In contests where there is a candidate for each of the major parties and also for at least a third party, the voter who decides that his own candidate from the major party has no chance of winning can switch his vote to that of the minor party.

This is well-known as a spoiling tactic and is more common among Britain's politically-sophisticated electorate than abstention.

For several reasons it could be an election-clincher, with the likely result either a Labor party majority or a new Labor party minority government. The Conservative party is unlikely to do well out of a heavy bout of tactical voting.

Lack a Majority

Labor would have to win 17 more seats with a 1.2 per cent swing away from the Conservatives to gain the magic 318 seats for a minimum over-all majority in this 635-seat parliament.

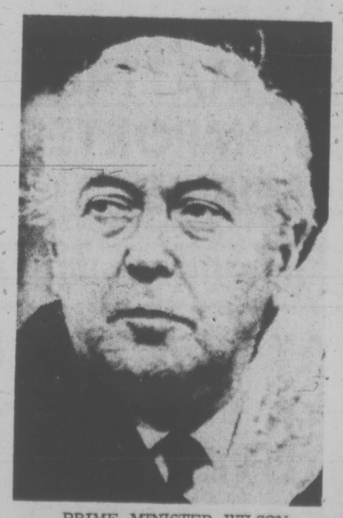
The Conservatives would need a 1.4 per cent swing away from Labor to bring them the extra 22 seats they need to reach 318 seats.

The Liberals and the Scottish National Party are the main obstacle to the old straight fight for power between the two big parties. The Welsh Nationalists and Ulster Unionists are of less relevance in assessing how national patterns may go.

While the most noticed effect of the Feb. 28 election was the six million votes won by the Liberals in their new surge of popularity, the most startling fact for all party managers was who ran second throughout the country.

In 207 constituencies Tories and Labor no longer held both first and second places. The Liberals alone came second in nearly 150 constituencies.

While British voters have always known about switch voting in hopeless seats, they have normally voted for their own party's candidate.



PRIME MINISTER WILSON
. . . could be a victim

Now there are indications from party surveys, letters to newspapers and opinion polls that a large number of British people want to give their votes greater meaning this time.

In the west of Scotland, Tory party tacticians feel the Scottish National Party will benefit from switching by Conservatives in Labor party strongholds. But the same trend is being noticed by Scottish Labor Party organizers talking to Labor voters in Conservative strongholds.

It is in England, especially in the south and west, that the Conservative party could be heavily damaged if supporters of third-place Labor candidates in February now switch their votes to the Liberals who ran a strong second in many ridings in these areas.

A senior Conservative organizer at London party headquarters did not hide his gloom at this possibility.

Internal Row

"We are aware of about 30 constituencies in the south and west where it would take only a switch by 50 per cent of those who voted Labor last time over to the Liberals to ensure a Liberal victory.

Much depends on whether the Liberals have retained the support of resentful white-collar workers who see their standards of living eroded by inflation. Despite the party's internal row over whether to countenance entering a coalition government, indications are that they have kept this support gained in February.

The looming danger of tactical voting explains the slightly ambiguous positions taken by both Labor and Conservative leaders at times recently.

Labor does not want its supporters to be so contemptuous of the Liberals that they would not vote for them where Tories could be defeated. The Conservatives would like Labor voters to be faithful to Labor, in situations where the Liberals were too close for comfort to Tory winners last time.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

On the Verge

It seems that we are on the verge of another Reid Centre debacle. Government Street is about to blossom forth with another memorial to civic ineptitude, the Nordal Mall.

Although plans have not been approved yet, demolition is proceeding with unseemly haste, and soon a two-block area will be flattened, the B.C. Land Building included. Heritage boards and committees apparently have no teeth and less muscle.

Looking toward City Hall for any type of leadership is a futile undertaking — after all we have the Reid Centre, Finlayson extension, Crystal Gardens, abortive mall, etc., as examples. If City Hall has problems coping with the present, the future will be its undoing.

Meanwhile the destruction of the city continues and it becomes uglier and uglier. — T. Palfrey, 3158 Jackson.

Vandalism

Don Joy recently stated during an open line radio program that the increase in vandalism and crime in the greater Victoria area was due to the overflow from Vancouver. Evidence does not support his contention.

While staying in Saanich this summer, I noticed far more rough behavior than in rural Surrey. Your potential vandalism appears higher just from observation and experience. The washrooms in the public parks of Saanich are mostly padlocked all day during the summer, while they are all open for use in Surrey even much of the winter. Some toilet tissue is wasted, but there appears to be very little actual damage.

This summer I was thoroughly investigated on two occasions by Saanich police officers while parked in a Saanich public park at about 10 a.m. The police officers were courteous each time but a complete investigation was made. Apparently there is a greater need for detection of vandalism and crime in Saanich than there is in Surrey. Such inspection by police officers in Surrey parks during the normal hours of park usage is unknown to me.

Surrey is far more vulnerable to an overflow from Vancouver than is the greater Victoria area. Yet there is far more roughness evident in the rural areas around Victoria than there is in rural Surrey. Here, we are quiet in comparison. Are men such as Don Joy afraid to lay the blame on the local residents where it belongs? Why play ostrich and remain oblivious to the acts which are committed by your own citizens?—C. A. White, 2083—154th Street, Surrey.

CUSO

This year's CUSO Returning Volunteer Meeting is being held from Sept. 27 to 29 at Camp Fircom, on Gambier Island. This meeting is intended for volunteers who have completed their overseas assignments in the last 12 months. Anyone interested should phone the B.C. Regional CUSO Office, 119 West Pender St., Vancouver, at 681-9031.—Chris Williams, for CUSO—BC-REC.

Scenic Railway

Just a short note to support your editorial of September 16, regarding use of C.N.R. tracks for a Victoria-Cowichan Lake scenic railway. At the outset, I have no shares in Victoria Pacific, and stand in no way to gain financially by your suggestion.

I support it on the merit it obviously possesses. It could perhaps reduce Island Highway congestion, and give some of the lagging rural communities a chance for revival, through catering at station stops. Good luck.—J. A. Pelter, 1262 Tattersall Drive.

Austerity

It must surely be obvious to everyone that we are in for a bad time. Call it what you like — depression, recession, slump — galloping inflation and hard times are on the way. Why not bring in rationing now and stave off some of the threatened disaster?

We should eliminate some of the unnecessary luxury living, travel, auto and boat racing, etc., and cut the speed on the roads to at most 55 miles an hour, and so save both gasoline and lives. Cultivation of vegetable gardens should be encouraged, also the keeping of chickens in back yards; much that is now thrown away in garbage cans would go a long way towards keeping them in food.—E.W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful St.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of September 20, 1914

Soldiers in a patrol boat guarding Esquimalt drydock fired warning shots into the air when launches violated regulations prohibiting movement after dark. Between nine and ten, two boats were spotted through the thick darkness. Men in the patrol boat challenged the craft but both failed to return the countersign, which brought the shots. Those in charge of one of the boats thought it then prudent to come about and stop and explain themselves to the guards. A sharp warning was administered to the miscreant men in uniform.

The Class Struggle Of Soviet Schools

By JONATHAN STEELE
Manchester Guardian

The nail-biting and the tense wait for the postman are over. Last week another batch of 4,000 young people reached the summit of the Soviet Union's highly competitive education system and started their first term at Moscow University.

For most Russians August is a holiday month, but not for the thousands of school-leavers who want to begin university in September. Most of the entrance examinations only start in August and it is quite normal for people not to know whether they have got a place at the university until six days before term starts.

At Moscow's arts faculties this year, would-be freshmen gave in their applications from mid-June to the end of July, sat their examinations in the first three weeks of August, and got their results between August 21 and 25.

This is the agonising climax of one of the tensest years in many Muscovites' lives. Because of the fierce competition some three quarters of the capital's potential university entrants take concentrated, and expensive, private tuition during their last year at school.

The demand for university places is enormous. The rewards in terms of higher pay and status are clear to anyone, even without the party's constantly repeated messages that everyone should strive to improve their qualifications.

If a man or woman goes to night school or takes a correspondence course this is regarded not just as his or her personal affair, but as a valuable contribution to the building of socialism. Many factories and institutes put down as one of their annual targets the "Socialist commitment" for a certain percentage of their staff to get extra diplomas or degrees during the year.

This tremendous drive comes to a head in the system of higher education. According to Soviet statistics, the country last year had 825 institutions of higher learning, including 58 universities. About 2,400,000 students attended day-time lectures, and almost as may were at evening courses (640,000) or studied by correspondence (1,600,000).

But supply still outstrips demand, and in a climate of scarcity other factors take precedence over the Constitution's proclaimed right to equal education for all Soviet citizens.

Income, geography, and in some instances string-pulling are useful assets on the road to the best in Soviet higher education, except for the minority of "diamonds" who are so brilliant that any university would eagerly enrol them as students.

"One problem is that everyone wants Moscow University," says Vladimir Anatolievich Georgiev, who is in charge of the examination commission at Moscow's philological faculty. Faced by the odds, only the realists apply. Even so, for 175 vacancies this year, the faculty had 1,200 applications. In other, more popular faculties (traditionally, biology and journalism), the ratio of applications to vacancies is apparently often 30 to one.

Most people adopt a kind of self-selection, and apply only to the university where they think they can get in. Because of a shortage of accommodation, the majority of students live at home and this means that Soviet universities tend to be "local."

Even Moscow University, the country's oldest and most famous university, is taking a higher percentage of Muscovites these days as the demand for expansion grows. It has 21,000 full-time students and all those in lodgings are housed in the huge Stalinist wedding-cake building that dominates the Lenin Hills.

The holding of the entrance examination at the university would also appear to discourage applicants from far-away regions of the Soviet Union. They have to pay their own fare and costs in attending it, and only a few can be housed during the exams on the campus itself. But Georgiev denies that this plays a role. He points out a number of provisions designed to give people from distant republics a fair chance.

Moscow University . . . a rat race to get in

The faculty also has a "preparatory" department which last year took 39 people, sent by State farms, factories, and national republics. They spend eight months being coached before being admitted without an examination.

Even so, in spite of all these provisions, out of 900 full-time students last year about 800 were Russian. Another 37 were Ukrainian, and the rest were divided between 24 other nationalities.

Income also matters, since most parents pay for private tuition for their children. The wall notice-boards in Moscow are always covered with advertisements offering coaching. Although teachers have to be officially registered, they make good money at about three roubles ($4) an hour.

Parents who cannot afford these classes can always enrol their child in one of the preparatory courses which Moscow University itself runs. These are held in the evenings or by correspondence and cost about seven roubles a month. They are also open to people who have failed to get in from school and who then go to the army or start work.

A significant number of the annual entrants to Moscow University are people who have already left school for two years. They also have to take an examination but it is of a lower standard than the fiercely competitive one which school-leavers face.

This scheme of late entrance to university is the main socially egalitarian feature in the whole system. It allows the administration to ensure an acceptable quota of students from workers' and peasants' families, some of whom may fall out of the academic rat race in the secondary schools or whose parents may not be able to pay for private tuition.

Who Should They Represent?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Why does the challenge to Gene Whelan, the farmer's friend, from Marcel Ouellet, the consumer's friend, generate excitement and amusement?

We are unused to such public chivvying between two ministers of the same cabinet. It is the Canadian tradition, supported overwhelmingly by practice, that differences of opinion, particularly on policy, should be settled in the privacy of the cabinet. That "privacy" is supported by law.

It is literally unlawful for a cabinet minister to reveal the detailed course and tenor of cabinet discussion to the public. Both the law and the tradition are taken seriously by almost every federal minister I have known. Not that one is unaware of animosities, sometimes very bitter, between certain ministers.

There are always a few ministers who tend to give a reading to reporters of the way the cabinet divides or has divided in discussion on a major decision.

Kierans was first

However, it is rare that we get one minister picking a public argument with another minister as Ouellet has done with Whelan. Back in the early days of the Trudeau government, Eric Kierans challenged publicly some of the reigning policies in external affairs and defence. Kierans was encouraged by the PM's indication that he wanted a public discussion and re-adjustments of Canada's position in NATO and NORAD. But that episode was pretty impersonal.

It can be argued that Trudea has stimulated the kind of ministerial argument we are witnessing over eggs. He has encouraged (almost to stating it as a principle) the idea that a minister of the Crown represents in Parliament, in the caucus, and in the cabinet, the specific interest groups embraced by the subject range of his portfolio.

A few years ago, Bryce Mackasay, as minister of labor, and Jean-Luc Pepin, as minister of industry, trade and commerce, both gave tongue to this "representative" principle. Their successors, John Munro, and Alistair Gillespie have seemed to agree with the principle.

However, does Jimmy Richardson speak for the servicemen, the militia, etc., Dan Macdonald for the "vets", Judd Buchanan for the Indians and Eskimos, John Turner for the bankers and bond houses, Bob Andras for the unemployed, Warren Allmand for the prisoners in penitentiaries, Romeo Leblanc for the fishermen, Otto Lang for the grain-farmers of the Prairies, Ron Basford for the taxpayers, Gerard Pelletier for the broadcasters, etc.?

Notice that as one moves along through the list and possible interests, the sillier the whole principle seems to be. Does Allmand represent the convicts or the RCMP or the prison guards? Does Otto Lang represent the anti-abortionists or the pro-abortionists? Does Don Jamieson have a duty to represent the "boondocks" as minister for DREE? As minister of transport, does Marchand represent the conflicting interests of CPR, CNR, CPA, Air Canada, rail versus air; rail workers versus management?

Confuse everyone

Who does Bud Drury in public works represent, the buyer of goods and services or the contractor engaged for them?

If more than two or three ministers talked and acted publicly as spokesmen for the major interests in their particular realm, we'd soon have the Whelan-Ouellet situation repeated again and again, confusing everyone.

The longer term aspect of it is even more sobering. It is to envisage at all times when cabinet is meeting to make decisions that each minister speaks from his interest's viewpoint, not from that of the general good.

And that the Prime Minister, in taking or striking the decision, is really judging on the basis of which interest was best advanced by which minister.

Note that there is a distinction between a ministry such as labor or agriculture and one like energy or one like Treasury Board. That is, one can see the minister of labor as the trade union's friend or the minister of agriculture a the champion of the farmers. But extend the idea and it gets ridiculous very quickly.

Even within a ministry such as agriculture it can be silly. For example, the interests of Eastern and Western farmers are rarely in harmony on the matter of feed grains. Which groups of farmers does friend Whelan satisfy?

'Carried away'

It is probably most useful, as the beginning of a salvage operation for Gene Whelan as minister of the Crown, that Ouellet has challenged Whelan head-on. Clearly, the minister of agriculture was being carried away with the momentum of his declared avowals for the farmers. He has been mouthing words at great speed without taking the time for his arguments to be sensible or persuasive.

He has been over-using his effective bucolic irony. He was getting to be his own laughable caricature. I also understand, getting back to cabinet matters, that he's been talking too much and too savagely at cabinet meetings for his own credibility as a politician.

Kissinger: A Long and Dark View of History

By STEPHEN S. ROSENFELD
The Washington Post

To go barking after the CIA because of its secret operations in Chile is beside the point. The agency, in subverting the late Socialist President Salvador Allende, was carrying out established national policy — White House policy. The CIA's director, William Colby, who was in the position of reporting to Congress about actions taken under earlier directors, deserves praise for his candor.

The real need is to fathom why Henry Kissinger, then (1970-73) Nixon's national security adviser, felt it was essential to get rid of one particular leader of a country which, by its region, size and general importance, plays almost no part in the global balance of power, on which Kissinger's strategy supposedly is based.

★

Interestingly, Allende and Chile are not mentioned once in the absorbing new book, "Kissinger," by Bernard and Marvin Kalb. The only public clue to his thinking is pretty insubstantial. An Allende "takeover," Kissinger said in 1970 of Allende's electoral victory, could produce over the time "some sort of Communist government" which could pose "massive problems for us, and for democratic forces and pro-U.S. forces in Latin America."

What were those "massive problems" which the United States set out to help deter by covert means?

No doubt Kissinger and Nixon wanted, if possible, to limit leftist movements throughout Latin America: "no more Cubas." But in view of Washington's moves then toward Moscow, and its tentative move now toward Havana, this hardly seems an adequate rationale.

Nor can a very persuasive case be made that the defense of the United States' then-embattled corporate interests in Chile — and by extension, elsewhere in the third world — required measures so extreme. You have to be a Marxist, or to think Kissinger and Nixon were pretty stupid, to believe that was a dominant factor.

For what it's worth, I suspect Kissinger feared that the example of a successful popular front government in Chile — Communists and Socialists working together — might have a contagious effect in France and Italy and other places where, in the 1970s, popular fronts have a real chance of coming to power. Kissinger voiced this fear in discussing Chile policy privately at the time.

The election of a Socialist-Communist coalition in Chile had, after all, aroused global attention. Communist parties were widely being made respectable, in part by the example of Richard Nixon in dealing with Moscow and Peking. Their "natural" political partners were and are the democratic socialist parties of the left. It was not far-fetched — not then, not now — to imagine popular fronts taking power and, degree by degree, removing their countries from the "West," as the area of postwar American dominance is commonly known.

It is suggestive that CIA director Colby apparently ranked the Chile operation in importance with postwar Greece and Guatemala and described it as a "prototype" for bringing foreign governments down with money. In postwar Greece, the United States helped Athens defeat a Communist insurgency launched across a national frontier. In Guatemala in 1958, the CIA sponsored a military coup against a Communist government. In Chile it provided financial support to help local elements thwart an elected Marxist who was expected to take Chile towards communism by a parliamentary route.

Kissinger, using wit as a cloak, has quipped that Chile is "a dagger pointed at the heart of Antarctica." His implication: How can anyone think he was uptight about Chile? But perhaps he was uptight about Chile.

Temperamentally, what Kissinger seems to fear most in the current international scene is the flux, the uncertainty, the difficult of convincing the American public to deal with international challenges less evident — but in his mind, hardly less ominous — than military attack.

COLBY
. . . candor

Kissinger is a child of Weimar Germany: He has seen democracy destroyed. He has some of the European intellectual's characteristic ambivalence about popular democracy, for whose putative weaknesses he attempts to compensate by diplomatic manipulation, elitism, secrecy, personal virtuosity. This is of a piece with his scarcely concealed contempt for Europe's cravenness — an attitude of which the public saw traces after the Mideast war last year.

★

It is the conventional wisdom that Vietnam taught the United States that it could no longer play the "policeman" of the world. Perhaps it taught Kissinger, whose view of history is long and dark and extends much beyond Vietnam, that the United States must play the policeman in a particular way — a way that fends off feared foreign dangers but does not bring down the domestic public's wrath on the government's or one's own head.

There is something undeniably valiant about Kissinger's purposes, but there can be something undeniably vicious about his means. Is there no other way for the values and the interests of the United States to thrive?

More Than a Game?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Since reading of Bobby Hull's approach to the Team Canada encounter with the Russian hockey players, we have suffered a gnawing awareness of our own frivolous view of hockey as nothing more than skill and stamina.

When Mr. Hull takes to the ice in Canada's colors this week, it will be with a much nobler outlook: "We are representing Canada as a free country and free citizens. We want to show people of other countries how much we appreciate living in a free country."

By winning, presumably — in which case, they'd better not lose. We grant you that Bobby Hull knows a thing or two about the advantages of the capitalist system, but we didn't have an ideological clash in mind.

The Bending of a Liberal

RUSSELL BAKER

I stepped out of the house the other night to find a young man bending the radio aerial of my car some 90 degrees off the vertical and detained him with the idea of calling the police.

To do so, he said, would be an act beneath contempt. He said he had had a very low opinion of the owner of this particular car when he first saw it parked there, but had certainly not expected him to be the sort of swine who called the police about every little act of self-expression.

"Self-expression?" I said. "My good lad, you have vandalized my car, see?" And I put my hand on the mutilated aerial which snapped and fell off.

"You ruined it," he said.

"Ruined what?"

"I am an enraged youth struggling to express my frustration and anger with a sick society which flaunts radio aerials on its cars," he said. "I put a lot of myself into bending that aerial so that it expressed my bitterness with poignant despair and now you've broken it. It's ruined."

"I didn't mean to," I said.

"Oh, don't apologize," he said. "I don't want apologies from people like you."

This was annoying. "Look here," I said, "I'm not like most people whose aerials you express yourself on. I happen to have Van Gogh prints on my bathroom wall, and on that car radio you've just silenced I never listen to anything but the good music station."

"Hah!" he cried. "I knew it the minute I saw that car sitting here. Have you ever heard about Bangladesh? Have you ever heard about the ghetto?"

He had me there. Oh, I had heard about Bangladesh all right, and the ghetto too, but what had I ever done about either one? For that matter, the young man hadn't guessed half of it. What had I ever done about women's rights?

Sensing my guilt, he twisted the knife. "Yeah," he said, "a guy like you is just the kind of guy I might have known would let his car sit around with the aerial sticking straight up in the sky when the people are oppressed flat out on the ground."

What had I ever done about the tyranny of the telephone company, I asked myself.

"Tell you what," I said. "Why don't you take the aerial and bend it into a triumphant expression of youth's determination to be free of the dead hand of the past?"

"Keep your precious old aerial," he said. "I accept no gifts from a man who is hung up on his car."

Hung up on my car! He was right. Two days earlier I had spent an hour trying to get its rotten materialistic windshield washers to work again. That had actually seemed important to me. I had lost my temper when they refused to work despite my labors.

"I'm not hung up on my car," I lied. "My car is nothing to me. Look!" And I kicked the car in the left rear tire just as hard as I could. "That's how I feel about my car."

"Oh, man, you're something," he said. "Did you ever hear of love? You come out of your house and see one of the people struggling against this machine symbol of materialistic oppression and right away you're on the machine's side. You love machines so much you don't even know how to love people."

How could I make him understand that it was not that I didn't want to love people, because I did want to love them. Love was what everything was all about. I had seen enough movies to know that, heard enough folk songs. It was just that people made it so hard to love them, what with their always bending your aerials because they weren't being loved enough. And then you had to go into the repair shop where nobody ever loved you back, no matter how lovable you behaved while they put on a new aerial.

What had I ever done about migrant labor?

It was impossible, of course, to call the police. I was the one who should have been jailed. I was the one who had turned this boy into an aerial bender.

"You must forgive me," I told him. "If you wait a moment, I will bring out an axe and let you slash my tires."

"Not a chance," he said. "I wouldn't waste my time expressing myself on the tires of the likes of you."

I thought momentarily of smashing my windshield to show society how it stood with me, but didn't, I shall fight pollution instead, starting next month.

School Contract Union 'Victory'

KELOWNA (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached Thursday between 400 Okanagan school employees and five district school boards.

Aubrey Burton, national representative of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the one-year contract proposed in the agreement constitutes a major victory.

"We are very pleased with the one year term," he said. "Management has told us throughout negotiations they would only consider a two-year term.

"But they obviously have seen the merit in our position."

Fred Patabachnick, another CUPE spokesman, said the union would try to arrange a membership vote on the contract soon. He said Burton recommended the agreement be accepted.

Details of the proposed contract were not released but the settlement would include a wage increase in three stages over one year, Patabachnick said.

Negotiations between CUPE and the Shuswap, Vernon, Kelowna, Summerland and Penticton school boards began here Tuesday in an attempt to settle the strike which has disrupted the schools for three weeks.

The walkout of CUPE workers Aug. 29 caused the closure of all schools in the Shuswap and Kelowna school districts, the reduced operation of junior and senior secondary schools in Penticton, and closed schools in Vernon for morning sessions.

Patabachnick said the proposed contract is better than the one reached recently in the West Kootenay.

Workers there agreed to a two-year contract with an 18-per-cent wage increase retroactive to July 1, 1974, and a 13-per-cent increase effective March 1, 1975.

The West Kootenay contract includes a cost-of-living provision, fringe benefits to workers from their time of hiring, improved afternoon and night shift premiums in the second year and a technological change provision to protect senior employees.

Bomber Admits CP Extortion

VANCOUVER (CP) — Konstantinos Issighos, 30, pleaded guilty in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday to attempting to extort $200,000 from CP Air with a bomb threat.

He also pleaded guilty to possessing an explosive substance, prima cord, for an unlawful purpose.

Crown counsel John Reynolds told the court Issighos phoned the airline Feb. 4, 1972, and said he had placed a bomb in a locker on the departure level at Vancouver International Airport.

Reynolds said the accused added that he had placed a similar bomb on a Tokyo-bound CP Air flight that had left Vancouver.

Crown counsel said airline officials didn't take the call seriously until a briefcase rigged as a bomb was found in the locker.

He said the briefcase bomb included 8½ pounds of prima cord, detonators, electric blasting caps and two 12-volt batteries.

Reynolds said the bomb was in a locker that was close to the top of an escalator.

He said airport officials then issued a bomb alert and the Tokyo flight was diverted to Anchorage, Alaska, where the FBI searched the plane. No bomb was found.

Mr. Justice D. E. Andrews adjourned the hearing to Sept. 26 for a defence submission to sentencing.

Greeks Stall UN, Turkish Patients

NICOSIA (CP) — A Canadian ambulance carrying Turkish civilian patients to hospital was delayed on a highway on the outskirts of Nicosia for nearly three hours Thursday by Greek-Cypriot police.

Capt. Mike Krempowich, a doctor from Kingston, Ont., and his team finally managed to deliver his nine patients to a Turkish-Cypriot hospital here but only after a prolonged palaver.

The Canadians, serving with the United Nations peace-keeping force in Cyprus, went to the Turkish-Cypriot village of Kotchati, 15 miles south of the capital, after a patrol led by Capt. Phil Campbell of Edmonton found numerous children and adults were ill there.

But the Krempowich party — an ambulance and jeep — was stopped at a crossroads by police, who demanded that the patients — if they were really sick — be taken first to a Greek rather than a Turkish hospital to be examined. They included women and babies.

Two Canadian corporals sat impassive in the front seat of the ambulance as the doctor explained that the people of Kotchati would be up in arms if their kinfolk were delivered to a Greek hospital.

A big traffic jam began to build up and the police commander eventually gave way, apparently persuaded at least in part by the arrival of television cameras.

Grain Firms Deny Benefit Cut-Offs

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for grain companies involved in the closure of waterfront grain terminals has rejected a union accusation that the companies will cut off medical, life insurance and other benefits at the end of the month.

Bill Mead said Wednesday the companies have been good enough to continue the payments to the end of September despite the closure which started Aug. 27 and the companies see no need to pay them beyond that point.

He said the union has been given the option of co-operating with the companies to keep up the payments.

Henry Kanes, spokesman for Local 333 of the Grain Workers Union, has said that it will cost the union $28,000 to keep up the payments for October for 550 regular and 53 part-time employees.

The workers have been without a contract since Nov. 30, 1973. The companies have refused to accept the conciliation report of Dr. Neil Perry who was brought in when bargaining failed.

The Perry report, accepted by the union, provides increases of 87 cents and 64 cents an hour on a base rate of $4.96 in a two-year package that also includes cost-of-living benefits and a new pension plan.

Shop Around, Survey Advises

By PETER THOMSON
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — The Food Prices Review Board, in a detailed study of prices in Ottawa-Hull supermarkets, has found wide discrepancies in prices for similar products.

The board reported yesterday that the weighted price index for two stores in the Gatineau-Hull area was more than 14 per cent — suggesting that shoppers could save that much on their food budget by patronizing the lower priced store.

The study is being conducted only in the Ottawa-Hull area and will result in a number of weekly reports to assist consumers in the area in deciding which store, or stores, offer the best food buys each week.

Food prices in up to 27 stores have been recorded over the past five months on the basis of a basic "food basket" that lists the items that are important to the average family's shopping budget. Prices of the items have been "weighted" in proportion to their importance in the average family food budget as published by Statistics Canada.

The board has surveyed more than 2,000 consumers to obtain opinion on how factors, other than price, affect their shopping habits.

Location of the store, store layout, courtesy and helpfulness of store personnel, efficiency of check-out service, and the quality of merchandise are among the non-price factors taken into account by shoppers.

The board also states that there could be a discrepency of two to three per cent in the total weighed price arrived at in the board's study.

In its first weekly report the board ranked stores in four different Ottawa-Hull areas on the basis of a weighted price index.

Stores changed rank considerably in a few weeks, the report shows.

The rapid position changing in Food Board rankings indicates the weekly reports tight be of limited value in helping shoppers, unless the board can get its reports out in advance of the price postings.

Another aspect of the survey rates different supermarket chains or groups of stores for different food items.

Again there were major variations in rank, among the six groups of stores studied, for different products.

If you don't have 6 inches of insulation in your attic, you don't have enough.

The cost of living is high enough, without spending more than you have to on heat.

And you are, because at today's fuel prices, most houses in this country are under-insulated. Even the brand new ones don't have enough insulation to protect you against the rapidly rising cost of fuel.

Now, what about your house? How much insulation do you have? If you don't know, go up into your attic and measure it. If you don't have 6" of insulation, you don't have enough.

1 Fuel is going to cost even more. It's time to learn about insulation. The message from the energy industry and government comes through loud and clear. They say the cost of all fuels will continue to rise. By 1990 the costs will be double what they are today.

Your fuel bill is going to be doubled. And you'll consider yourself lucky to have fuel.

The only way to offset this horrendous increase in the cost of heating is to use less fuel.

And you can. You can heat your house on less if you have proper insulation.

2 How much is enough? And where does it all go? First, the "where". The greatest heat loss in any house is through the ceiling. Heat rises and simply radiates through the ceiling into the attic which is vented to the outside.

To stop this needless waste of heat and money you need at least 6" of insulation in the attic. 8" would be better. And that's about double what most houses have right now.

3 It doesn't cost a fortune to upgrade your insulation. From here we can't say how much, because we don't know how big your attic is, or how much insulation you already have. But insulation is not expensive material — especially when you consider how much it can save you.

And you can do the job yourself. Your local building supply dealer has Fiberglas* Insulation in easy-to-install batts, rolls or pouring wool that you can put in place yourself. Or, if you prefer, an insulation contractor can do the job for you.

Either way, it's a very worthwhile investment.

4 Upgrading your insulation is not the only thing you should do. To get the most out of your heating dollars you should have your furnace serviced regularly so that it's operating efficiently. Change air filters at least 4 times during the heating season and install Fiberglas DUST-STOP* Filters. Make sure your storm windows and doors fit tightly. Caulk any cracks and chinks around doors and windows and weatherstrip all doors. Install a humidifier. And to turn the thermostat down at night, or when you go out for the day.

5 We're concerned. We want you to be ready. The rising cost of fuel has already hit most Canadian families. And as Canada's largest manufacturer of home insulation products, we feel that it's our responsibility to tell you how you can protect yourself against further increases.

If you want more information on home insulation products, ask your local building supply dealer. And when you buy, get "the real McCoy", Fiberglas Home Insulation. It's coloured pink and comes in easy-to-handle poly-bags.

Fiberglas — it's the same kind you probably already have in your house.

You Can Still Take Flyer On Old Chinese Issue

By NANCY L. ROSS

WASHINGTON (WP) — What do bonds issued by the Chinese government in 1913 have in common with the Sabre Pinon Uranium Co.?

Little, it would seem, had they not both been brought to the attention of Micheline Masse (pronounced Mas-SAY). This Montreal businesswoman heads the Stock Market Information Service Inc., a firm that specializes in tracing old stocks and bonds the way genealogists trace family trees.

Yet, whereas ancestor hunters are generally looking for fame — a dukedom granting descendants the right to a fancy crest — Miss Masse is unabashedly looking for fortune, the cash value of long-forgotten and no longer traded stocks. In the past five years her service has discovered more than half a million "lost" dollars hiding in so-called worthless certificates.

The Chinese bonds, issued by the first republican government after the fall of the Manchu dynasty and sold in the United States by its first president, Sun Yat-sen, were traced to London, where they are still traded on the stock exchange. Despite the People's Republic's refusal to honor the bonds of a previous regime, they have a cash value with speculators.

Money men are gambling the bonds can be redeemed if and when the United States government requires the People's Republic of China to honor the claims of American citizens in exchange for unfreezing Chinese assets in this country. (In the same way some Russian Imperial bonds, issued by the czars, are still traded privately in New York and elsewhere.)

The Chinese bonds were due to mature in 1960, but payment was stopped back in 1937. In 1910 they had a face value of 100 pounds sterling ($486) each. Backed by gold, they are each worth 12 pounds ($29) today, many wars and governments later.

Thus, to the owner the Chinese bond with its ornate chops and multilingual offering represents more of a conversation piece than a redeemable investment. Still, the bond owners are luckier than 90 per cent of Miss Masse's clients whose certificates proved truly worthless. It's that tenth client who makes her paper treasure hunt worthwhile — and profitable.

Two years ago a Miami engineer decided to risk the fee to check out the uranium stocks he had purchased in the early 1950s. He was informed four of the five companies in which he invested had died a natural death. The fifth, Sabre Pinon Uranium Co., was found to have merged with United Nuclear Corp. His 2,000 shares had a market value of $36,000.

The Masse firm is limited to informing its clients of the stock's value and the company's address. It does not arrange the sale. Nor does it have the power to investigate a company to be sure it is honest when it declares its old certificates have no value. Investors in fly-by-night companies are usually out of luck.

Stock Market Information Service charges a flat $20 per company plus a photocopy of the certificate. The fee is refunded if it cannot locate the company — a rare occurence — but not, however, if the stock proves worthless. Its services are geared to the erstwhile investor or recipient of certificates who doesn't have a broker.

While major brokerage houses will do the same research free for customers (their profit comes in a percentage sales commission), Miss Masse claims to have the world's only firm devoted to the sole business of certificate research.

When interviewed recently in Washington, she was hot on the trail of some old American real estate stock. Eighty per cent of her firm's work is conducted in this country, although it also has clients and does research in Western Europe, Latin America, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and Hong Kong.

This profession developed a dozen years ago when Micheline Masse decided to paper her living room walls with a friend's "worthless" stock certificates. Before the housewife could apply the paste, though, the business student instinct in her made her wonder if they might possibly have some value.

A quick trip to the library and some digging in musty old business directories revealed the firm had long ago sold out to a large corporation. Yet, upon calling the corporation, she found one old stock actually had a cash value of $2,000.

She returned the certificate to its delighted owner who, promptly spread the news of her good fortune. So did Miss Masse's stockbroker husband, Joseph Bonneau. Soon she found herself deluged with requests from friends and strangers alike to trace old certificates. Seven years later, after her third child entered school, she decided to turn her hobby into a business.

GOLD BALLOON DEFLATED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The price of gold will not take off to astronomical heights, economist Dr. Maurice Levi of the University of British Columbia commerce faculty said Thursday.

He told members of the Vancouver Society of Financial Analysts that he based his prediction on prospective developments in the international financial system, prospective developments in the equity market, the element of risk in gold and the demand of U.S. citizens for gold when it becomes legal for them to hold in it January, 1975.

Italy has been allowed to use gold as collateral for loans and "the suggestion in this is that gold be demonetized."

"If this happens, it means the central banks will sell gold, though it wouldn't all be dumped at once," he said.

"If gold ends up on the market, the price will fall. In 10 years the central banks won't hold gold. Even with a flexible exchange rate there is no need to hold either foreign exchange or gold."

Over-Border Ad Clamps Hinted

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal government is considering legislative action forbidding advertisers to deduct expenditures on United States television stations from taxable revenue.

The newspaper says a spokesman for Finance Minister John Turner said Thursday he was unaware of any discussion of the issue, but he added it would probably develop either in the Communications Department or the Secretary-of-State Department, both of which are concerned with broadcasting and cultural matters.

The newspaper quotes a spokesman for State Secretary Hugh Faulkner as saying the issue "is under discussion but we have nothing to report at this time."

It also says a spokesman for Gerald Pelletier, communications minister, confirmed that the issue "is under study, but I do not know if it would be included in the throne speech."

The move was first requested three years ago by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission as a way of deterring Canadian advertisers from buying advertising time on U.S. border television stations instead of Canadian stations.

Quebec's Laser Beams Brightly

MONTREAL (CP) — Ian Bruce, president of Performance Sailcraft Inc., keeps getting calls from places like the Harvard Business School.

They want to do case studies on how he found the "hole in the market."

What Bruce has found, with partners Ward McKimm, Andre Julian and Scott Warren, is a 14-foot, 130-pound sailboat called the Laser.

Four years after the Laser emerged on the drawing board, about 20,000 have been produced in operations that centre on a factory in suburban Beaconsfield.

The $855 sailboat is also being manufactured in California, England, Ireland, New Zealand and Australia. Worldwide, more than 240 dealers and agents sell Laser exclusively. Internationally, 1,000 are made each month.

Originally, Bruce and his colleagues thought in terms of the "cottage" market. But things worked out well. They shifted their emphasis and began promoting to sophisticated yachtsmen.

Bruce, 41, plays down the idea of finding a hole in the market. "Our timing was an extraordinary stroke of good luck."

The idea for the boat came from Bruce, who had his own industrial design office here.

He had long felt the need for a Laser-type boat and for two years worked on prototypes. The boat combines characteristics of professional racing craft and beginning-sailor models.

Finally, with another Olympic helmsman, Bruce Kirby, and former Danish sailor Hans Foch, the plan for the Laser evolved.

Bruce estimates the first Laser cost about $2,000. Mr. Foch, the sail designer, raced her in America's Teacup Regatta at Chicago, finishing fourth the first time she was in the water.

That evening in March, 1971, Foch recut the sails and the next day the Laser won. Other prototypes followed, eventually arriving at the present form.

The clamor for orders came soon after that first race and Performance Sailcraft was back-ordered for 700 boats selling at $695 each.

But at the end of August, 1971, the U.S. government slapped a 10-per-cent surcharge on all imports and the company stopped shipping.

The firm was forced to secure $500,000 in loans from shareholders and a bank. "We never had any doubts on the marketability of the boat," Mr. Bruce says.

Based on the boat's worldwide prestige, the firm was soon back in operation, and Mr. Bruce says the major challenge at present is to find better production methods at the same cost.

"I know we could sell the boat for $1,000 but that's just not our philosophy," he said. "Our big goal is to see if we can hold the price at $850 through this year."

CHINA ADDS MISSILES

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union leads the world in the number of long-range missiles and China is "slowly but steadily" building up its nuclear capability, an authoritative British research institute said Friday.

In its annual survey, the International Institute for Strategic Studies reported that the Soviet Union has nearly 600 more long-range nuclear missiles in its armory than the U.S. Based on current building plans, the U.S. atomic arsenal won't catch up for another five years, it added.

China is developing an inter-continental missile capable of reaching the U.S, but it has not yet been tested, the institute said in a review of world military forces up to July, 1974.

The Soviet Union was also developing four powerful new missiles that are far more accurate than those already deployed.

The institute is a non-partisan, non-governmental research organization for the study of defence and other military matters as well as disarmament. Its membership and staff come from many countries.

The survey showed a steady increase in Soviet inter-continental and submarine-launched nuclear missiles, while the number of American missiles has remained static since 1967.

Nixon Subpoena Quash Bid

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Former president Richard Nixon claimed executive privilege over his presidential tape recordings Thursday and asked that subpoenas in two civil cases resulting from the Watergate break-in be quashed.

The tapes had been subpoenaed as evidence in two civil actions resulting from the 1972 break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate office building.

Spencer Oliver, a former Democratic party official whose office in the Watergate had been electronically bugged, had sought the tapes for use in his suit against Nixon's 1972 re-election committee.

James McCord, leader of the Watergate burglary team, also sought them as evidence for his defence in a suit brought against him by the Democratic National Committee.

The new subpoena for Nixon in the Watergate cover-up trial, meanwhile, is likely to hasten an official opinion on the former president's health.

Unlike an earlier subpoena issued by lawyers for cover-up defendant John Ehrlichman, the new summons for Nixon is likely to make an early issue of Nixon's health.

Prosecutors need the former president to authenticate more than 30 White House tapes which they plan to play for the jury.

They include many conversations between Nixon and cover-up defendants.

Before the tapes can be admitted as evidence, someone must testify to their accuracy as recordings of real conversations.

The only persons who can do that are those who joined in the conversations or at least were present when they took place.

Nixon, reported to be planning to enter a hospital next week, is suffering from a blood clot disease call phlebitis.

His lawyer, Herbert Miller, has acknowledged the former president has shown "serious signs of strain and physical fatigue."

Miller, as he has done in an unrelated civil suit in California, is expected to ask Judge John Sirica to quash the subpoenas seeking Nixon's testimony.

A legal clerk to Sirica, Todd Christofferson, said that in cases where a defendant's or a witness' health is in question, the judge usually appoints a doctor to make an independent examination.

Also on Thursday, Special Watergate prosecuter Leon Jaworski asked the U.S. Court of Appeals to deny a request for indefinite postponement of the cover-up trial from Ehrlichman, and two other defendants, former White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman and former attorney general John Mitchell

Lawyers for the three said it would take a year before an impartial jury could be chosen for a fair trial.

VIC HIGH GRADS PLAN REUNION

A weekend reunion for 1969 graduates of Victoria high school is planned for Oct. 4 and 5.

The events, which begin with an open house at the school on the Friday evening, will be open to all graduates and teachers of that year.

A dinner dance will be held in the Commons Block of the University of Victoria on the Saturday, with music supplied by Magic.

Tickets are available at Watson's Men's Wear, 1435 Douglas, or at Ram Shack Clothiers in the Hillside shopping mall.

The reunion will be a warmup for the school's 100th anniversary in 1976, says publicity chairman Mrs. C. A. Lavoie.

Observatory Hours Change

Public viewing at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain will be between 8 and 10 p.m. Saturdays instead of 9 to 11 p.m.

These hours will continue until Oct. 26 after which public viewing will be closed until April 1.

'Mad, Random' Royalties Mean Chaos—Professor

Provincial governments have been groping in the dark in setting up their mineral leasing and royalty programs and the situation in Canada is getting close to chaotic, a conference on mineral leasing and royalties was told Thursday.

Professor Brian Mackenzie of the department of mining and metallurgy at McGill University said the provinces "have the idea they should get a lot of money from the resource industry, so they are madly and randomly putting on royalties."

"The provinces are leaving themselves wide discretionary powers. All this means is they are covering for their possible mistakes. If it doesn't work on the first run through they can change it and try again."

As a solution, Mackenzie suggested assessments of the mining environment to cover the average capital cost of finding the mineral deposit, the risk involved, and the return and distribution of returns on a successful mining venture.

To motivate production, he suggested companies and governments split revenues from a mineral reserve on a basis of the average rate of return for mining ventures. He said this would eliminate the weaker companies and allow the more competent ones to go on.

The conference spent several hours Wednesday discussing the values of various bidding and leasing systems.

Walter Mead, a professor of economics at the University of California, said the cash bonus bidding system of leasing resources, especially offshore oil, is the best available.

The system involves several companies making cash bids for a lease to explore and produce on a property. The amount of the bid is paid in cash before development starts by the company whose bid is accepted.

Mead said the advantages of this system are that the best possible price is obtained for resources, and small companies are largely prevented from bidding independently.

"No John Doe company has a right to be working an outer continental shelf lease," he said. "If there is any trouble, say an oil spill, you want a large company there to do something about it."

The conference continues today.

500 Investors Lose In $6M Tax Scheme

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — More than 500 investors were bilked in a fraudulent $6 million scheme involving the sale of securities in two oil and gas well tax shelter programs, according to a federal grand jury indictment issued Thursday.

Named as defendants in a 25-count indictment were Charles F. Raymond, Los Angeles, Calif. and David A. Bury and Gilbert J. Sharell, both of Medford, N.J.

The indictment said the tax shelters were the Moray oil program and the Westland, Ohio, 1971 program. Moray involved the sale of limited partnership interest in oil and gas wells in Kansas and Westland had similar interests in Ohio, authorities said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard M. Meltzer said the Moray program was devised so that a cash investment of $5,000 and a personal note of $7,500 per well would permit an investor to deduct almost twice his cash contribution from his income tax return.

The indictment charged that the investors were not informed that Raymond diverted for his own purposes about $500,000 of the $818,000 they contributed from November, 1969, through July, 1970.

The investors also were not told, the indictment said, that $1.1 million of the $2.2 million raised in the Moray program would be used for purposes other than drilling and completing the Kansas wells.

Meltzer said sales of the unregistered securities were conducted by the Commercial Property Funding Corp., a Pennsylvania firm operating from Cherry Hill, N.J., and its subsidiary, Economics Concepts, Inc.

Oregon Gas Layoffs

PORTLAND (AP) — Northwest Natural Gas Co. is proceeding with planned layoffs that eventually might affect 10 per cent of the firm's employees, says president Francis Hill.

He said the sales and distribution force is being reduced because the company expects a supply shortage and the Public Utility Commissioner has ordered it to accept no new customers.

The company, which had 1,150 employees, will continue the layoffs for the next few months, Hill said.

About 70 per cent of the employees laid off have been placed in jobs with other companies, he said.

Reduced supply, because Canadian wells are producing less gas than expected, won't seriously affect residential customers, he said.

The firm, which operates in Oregon and a small section of southwestern Washington, has 210,000 customers, most of them residential.

No Bucks Made Out of Blood

The public still seems to think that someone is "making a buck on the generosity of blood donors," Victoria Red Cross co-ordinator Gerry Savage said Thursday.

But the rumor isn't true, and hasn't been since the Red Cross started its blood donor service in B.C. in 1947, Savage said.

"The Red Cross does not pay donors for their blood, hospitals do not pay Red Cross for blood and there is no charge to patients for blood."

Savage said that even Canadian citizens travelling in the U.S. or Mexico will not be charged for a blood transfusion.

He said there is a reciprocal agreement that the Red Cross will exchange blood to "pay for" that used in treating a Canadian citizen.

The same sort of agreement also exists with Great Britain, the Phillippines, India and Switzerland.

Developments in blood science and in surgical techniques permitting heart and lung operations have increased the need for blood, Savage said.

"These lifesaving developments, marvellous in themselves, are totally dependent on blood given freely by donors," he said.

The Victoria Red Cross branch will sponsor three blood donor clinics next week: Monday and Tuesday at the Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 1:30-4:30 p.m. and 6:30-9 p.m., and at Camonsun College on Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15-3:30 p.m.

Pollution Curb Rollback Urged

DETROIT (WP) — Industrial leaders asked the U.S. government Thursday to hold off imposition of any new environmental standards, warning that anti-pollution and safety devices use up money that business could invest to increase output and thus hold down inflation.

Participation in the conference — one of a dozen being held preparatory to a nation-wide inflation summit next week — also voiced concern that national policies intended to combat rising prices may be weakening the economy.

Businessmen cited slumping production, rising unemployment and sky-high interest rates as major problem areas.

Most of the businessmen concurred that the Federal Reserve Board should loosen its grip on the money supply, Washington should reduce spending, and tax incentives should be devised to encourage personal savings and stimulate expansion of business productive capacity.

There was also agreement that there should be tax relief for those individuals at the lowest end of the income spectrum and that the government should become an employer of last resort if the unemployment rate continues to rise.

The 42 delegates expressed generally the same fears and proposed essentially the same solutions as a similar group of industrialists who met in Pittsburgh earlier in the week.

The large degree of concern about environmental and safety standards was reflected in the plentiful attendance by heavy manufacturers at the meeting — including the three biggest auto companies, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

Cyprus Refugee Aid Asked

Victoria's Greek community is appealing for donations of money and materials to be shipped to Creek Cypriot refugees.

The local chapter of the American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association (AHEPA) is looking for non-perishable foods, bedding, tents, clothing and kitchen utensils.

A collection centre has been set up at 2910 Fifth St., home of Hercules Georgiades, head of the local Greek community.

The goods will be shipped to the Cypriot embassy in Athens and from there to the island of Cyprus.

Many Greek Cypriots were forced to flee their homes recently when Cyprus was invaded by the Turkish army. The United Nations estimates 150,000 people have been displaced.

NO EMERGENCY IN FATAL RUN

The Saanich police cruiser involved in a fatal accident Sept. 2 was not on a true emergency run, a policeman told a coroner's jury Thursday.

The jury, hearing evidence in the death of Barbara Anne Payne, 35, of 831 Ellery, was told by Constable William Blaney that a call to which Constable Allan Kangas was responding — to help locate a stolen car — did require getting to an area as soon as possible.

Blaney was responding to the same call, but in another cruiser.

Kangas's cruiser was in collision with Mrs. Payne's car at the intersection of Tillicum and Trans-Canada Highway.

The inquest, which met for the third time Thursday, was adjourned to Wednesday.

Edward Kenney Dies at 86

Edward Kenney, former B.C. lands and forests minister, died in hospital Wednesday at 86 years of age.

Born in Nova Scotia, he came to B.C. in 1906 and played a prominent role in the industrial development of the province. The Kenney dam on the Nechako River was named in his honor.

The 19-year veteran of the legislature was never defeated in an election after he was elected MLA for Skeena in 1933.

The Terrace, B.C. resident was appointed lands and forests minister in 1944 during a Liberal-Conservative coalition government and became public works minister in 1952.

Funeral services were held Thursday.

Now kids can look it up in their own Funk & Wagnalls.

After 60 years of making encyclopedias for adults, Funk & Wagnalls has learned enough to make one for children.

It's called the Young Students Encyclopedia. And it's designed to do something more than just get them through the next homework assignment—to make them want to learn on their own.

Instead of burdening your children with tons of forgettable detail, it appeals to their native curiosity. The article on Airplanes, for example, illustrates an experiment children can perform at home showing how things fly. There are hundreds of other drawings, games and puzzles that not only teach but provoke, involve and entertain in the process.

In other words, it's an encyclopedia children will actually use. They'll also use it a long time.

It's designed to be simple enough for children just learning to read and comprehensive enough to serve until they're ready for an adult encyclopedia. They can't outgrow it the way they do shoes.

Which brings up another nice point about the Young Students Encyclopedia: it's intended exclusively to help children, but it helps grown-ups too.

First, it doesn't put much of a dent in your budget. Since it's sold direct to you through us, you can buy the complete 20-volume set a volume or two a week for only $1.99 each. And the first volume for the introductory price of twenty nine cents.

Second, it helps prevent you from doing what you shouldn't be doing anyway—your children's homework. It provides the answers; you just provide the encouragement.

So instead of just shopping for things to nourish growing bodies, come in and pick up a Young Students Encyclopedia. And nourish their minds as well.

Mounties Seek Their Men

VERNON (CP) — About 300 more RCMP constables are needed to improve police service in the province, John Hogarth, chairman of the British Columbia Police Commission, said Thursday.

Here to address the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention, he said a new formula must also be devised to help municipalities pay for better police service.

Large municipalities now pay 100 per cent of their police costs while those with less than 5,000 residents pay nothing.

Hogarth termed the situation "mischievous."

The province's RCMP strength of 3,100 is too few and it is his philosophy to spend more money on policemen than keeping people in prison, he added.

Details of the formula for sharing police costs have not been worked out but it is a high priority with the commission, he said.

Another priority is training of policemen. The RCMP, through training divisions in Victoria and Ottawa, has agreed to help 200 B.C. municipal policemen take courses this year.

The province will pay travel and accommodation costs and the RCMP will pay instruction costs.

Hogarth said it is also necessary to encourage municipalities to meet immediate recruiting and training needs without waiting for government subsidies which will pay each municipality maintaining its own force $10 a day for a recruit in an approved training program.

OAK BAY
RECYCLING DEPOT

There will be a mobile unit stationed just inside the Oak Bay Municipal Yard at 1771 Elgin Road each Wednesday from 10:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. for the reception of Newspapers, Paper, Cans, Glass Jars and Bottles. This service is an extension of the Regional Recycling Depot at 4026 Borden Street and will be co-ordinated by Regional Recycling staff.

Workers are required for this one day per week operation and anyone wishing to volunteer should contact the Regional Recycling Depot by phoning 479-1015.

Before the Judge

A man released Wednesday from Wilkinson Road jail was given a one-year jail sentence Thursday in provincial court for breaking into a drug store and theft.

James Lorne Etter, 32, pleaded guilty.

Etter, released from the jail after serving a term for breach of probation, was found by police inside the Medical Arts Dispensary, 1105 Pandora, 3:30 a.m. Thursday.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said Etter gained entry by smashing a basement window, then breaking a window leading to McGill and Orme pharmacy.

He admitted to police he had stolen a vial of pills.

Etter said he was looking for pills, but was not addicted.

"Why were you looking for pills?" Judge William Ostler then asked, and Etter replied, "It's hard to explain."

Police must sometimes use force to subdue a person, Ostler commented before fining two men and a woman $75 each for obstructing a policeman.

Richard Michael Alexander, 19, of 2273 Bellamy, told the court he had interfered with police who were called to the 1300-block Broad regarding a bill not being paid, because they were beating up Marion Kask, 25, of 3184 Milgrove.

Alexander and Miss Kask, along with Brian Wayne Trowsdale, 20, of Old Island Highway, pleaded guilty, but Ostler at first wondered whether he should accept the plea if there was a suggestion of a police beating.

Questioned by Ostler, Miss Kask said police were hitting her, and added: "I hit him (a policeman) so he hit me back."

Ostler then said it was perfectly apparent the policeman was not beating her up.

Trowsdale was fined another $20 for causing a disturbance by using obscene language.

A 19-year-old youth received a six-month jail term for committing a common assault on a 75-year-old man and a concurrent four-month term for wilful damage.

Dennis Carl Dawe, of 670 Pine, tried to trip the man and kicked him in his hip while on the 1100-block Esquimalt Sept. 3.

The charge of wilful damage concerned breaking the radio antenna Sept. 3 off a vehicle, owned by Reliable Transfer of Victoria, 400 Hillside, that was travelling east on Esquimalt Road.

* * *

Richard Rancourt, 41, of 545 Johnson, was sentenced to a four-month jail term, which Ostler recommended be served at Snowden forestry camp, for possessing a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

Rancourt waved a broken knife at two youths Sept. 3 in Nootka Court, and told one he was going to cut his face.

The incident was seen by an off duty police officer.

* * *

A 31-year-old man was sentenced to an eight-month jail term for breaking into the residence of Gordon Campbell, 2161 Eastdown, Tuesday and stealing a portable television, a suitcase, food, and typewriter.

Alfred Alcide Seguin, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty.

Seguin gained entry, along with another man, by breaking a back door window.

Ostler recommended Seguin serve his sentence at Alouette River Unit for alcoholics.

Harold and Ivy Morris, of 1127 Chapman, were ordered to face a county court trial after a preliminary hearing into a charge laid May 2 of theft by conversion of about $2,475 from the London Boxing and Athletic Club of Victoria and $795 from its women's auxiliary.

Stanley Richardson, of the same address, who had also been charged with the offence, was discharged.

Evidence at the four-day hearing was banned.

The trial is expected to be held in January, 1975.

An employee of People's Jewellers, 1654 Hillside, pleaded guilty to stealing money from the store Sept. 11.

Allan Tummon, 28, of 3159 Shelbourne, will be sentenced Oct. 3.

The theft concerned selling a ring worth $199.50 to a customer then ringing up a refund for it.

It was learned the customer still had the ring and had not returned it.

Edward John Galloway, 28, of Orofino, Idaho, was charged for a second time with failing to attend court May 29, 1972 for a county court trial on a charge of cultivating marijuana.

Galloway had been charged Wednesday, but his conviction, for which he was given a one-month jail sentence, was declared a nullity later in the day after Ostler realized the Crown had proceeded against Galloway "summarily."

The nullity was recorded because the six-month limitation period the Crown has if it proceeds in the summary method had expired.

Prosecutor Macdonald said the Crown was proceeding Thursday by "indictment," a more serious method which does not have the six-month limitation.

Galloway elected trial by county court judge.

Meanwhile, he was remanded in county court Thursday to today on the charge of cultivating marijuana.

Galloway, who got married Saturday, had come to Victoria with his bride to visit his sister.

Growing six marijuana plants in his garden produced a $100 fine for Dawson Nicholas Truax, 29, of 1753 Adanac.

Truax, who said he was unsure what effect a conviction would have on his career working for the government, pleaded guilty to possessing marijuana.

Police found the plants, between four and six feet tall, Sept. 4. A jar containing about a quarter ounce of marijuana was also found.

Ostler said, "cultivation of marijuana is a serious matter . . . it's rampant in this community."

* * *

In other drug cases, Kim Frederick Beith, 20, of no fixed address, was fined $75 for possessing marijuana and was given a suspended sentence and put on six-months' probation for possessing cannabis resin.

David Bryan McLeod, 25, of 1717 Fernwood, was fined $100 for possessing marijuana and was also given a suspended sentence and six-months' probation for shoplifting a pocket novel worth $1.65 from Eaton's, 1150 Douglas, Sept. 11.

He also ate a chocolate bar in the store without paying for it.

Credit Curbs Urged

Higher income taxes and controls on consumer credit could help fight inflation, executives of Norfolk and Retailers Trust and Savings Co. suggested at a meeting here this week.

Company president Ross Walker of Saskatoon, Victoria branch manager Brad Wolfe, and members of the honorary advisory board met at the Union Club to discuss the economy.

Other anti-inflation measures suggested by the group were:

— Tightening the money supply.

— Controls on credit, such as bigger initial payments and shorter lending periods.

— Increased productivity. Productivity in Canada is increasing at only 2.3 per cent, and a series of strikes have kept productivity down, said the group.

— Large international corporations have forced many independent businessmen to close down and prices have gone up.

— The Bank of Canada should lower interest rates.

Doomsday in Britain: Where's It Hiding?

LONDON (CP) — Gloom, despondency, despair, depression, fright, dismay and bewilderment are among a vast armory of adjectives being arrayed here to describe the mood of Britain in the days before the October 10 general election.

These stark descriptions are blazoned across the front pages and sprinkled through the editorials of national newspapers.

They pour forth in the speeches of opposition politicians, are reeled off with relish by many broadcasters and even find their way into the reports of some international news agencies.

But where do you find this doomsday atmosphere, asked one visitor.

"God," she added, "it sounds like you should be able to take a picture of it if it's as bad as they say."

If the girl had just passed a newsstand, she would have seen the Daily Mirror with its entire front page devoted to the single stark headline: "Oct 10: Your life in your hands."

And if she saw the main editorial of the usually-unflappable Times Thursday, she would have read in the opening paragraph: "There has been no election since the war which has been held in such a mood of public uncertainty and depression."

These newspapers and others, as well as the politicians and broadcasters who echo their sentiments, have, of course no intention of misleading the public or creating a false impression of pre-election Britain.

Nevertheless, there is no despondency in the streets, the shops, the pubs or the betting offices.

At the moment, the general atmosphere seems to be one of boredom, but even that is probably a fleeting sensation.

Elections in Britain tend to become something like a sporting event and nobody loves sport more than Britons.

To find the gloom and uncertainty, it seems, you have to talk to such people as stock-brokers, leading businessmen, bankers, economists and the politicians themselves.

The "guvnor" of your local pub, the neighborhood green grocer or the high street butcher all would acknowledge they have serious worries about inflation, the dangers of recession and the possibility of a tighter credit squeeze and unemployment.

Their concern seems greater than similar worries in, say, North America, simply because the problems of rising prices and business stagnation are more severe here.

But they would laugh you out of their premises at the suggestion that they are steeped in gloom and despair or irreversibly headed down the road to Armageddon. There simply are no overt signs of a general public panic.

Most Britons have been hearing warnings of impending economic disasters all their lives yet find their standard of living has improved nonetheless. All political pronouncement on the economy now seem to be greeted with a good deal of skepticism.

For the professional classes and the politicians, however, the concern and the pessimism is real.

Britain is faced with a balance-of-payment deficit which this year is expected to reach a record-shattering level. On top of that, inflation is running at more than 17 per cent a year and may even top 20 per cent before the year is out.

Business investment in new plant and equipment is actually falling.

Wage increases have reached a staggering annual average of 20 per cent for the first time in British history and several major businesses have recently collapsed.

But, so far, this has had little effect on the general quality of life in Britain. Its measure, civilized pace continues as it has for centuries and the country remains one of the most elegant and enriching places to live in the world.

Its problems are unquestionably mammoth but perhaps the absence of gloom among the general public springs from a kind of certainty that British ingenuity has never failed it in the past and is unlikely to do so now.

Angry Clash Over Jobless

LONDON (Reuter) — An angry clash between the government and the opposition Conservatives over unemployment marked the opening day of Britain's general election campaign.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson Thursday night evoked the spectre of millions of jobless in the 1930s and said there were powerful forces in the Conservative party who advocate higher unemployment as essential to the solution of economic problems.

Taking advantage of the latest jobless figures, which were better than expected, Wilson claimed his government's policies to reduce unemployment were beginning to succeed.

Speaking in his Liverpool constituency, he recalled there had been nearly one million unemployed in 1972, during the Conservative administration of Edward Heath, and added: "If you include the wives and children there were three or four million in 1972 living in families afflicted by unemployment."

Conservative finance spokesman Robert Carr said in a statement later that the prime minister had made an untrue and unworthy accusation that was unwarranted and without justification.

LOOK TO SCOTLAND

In his first election address on television, Heath chose to be interviewed by a pretty young woman rather than deliver a speech.

He described the economic crisis as the biggest Britain had faced in peacetime since 1931 and painted a sombre picture of the outlook over the next few years.

Party leaders seem agreed that the shape of the next parliament may be decided by the way Scotland's 3.7 million electors vote.

Liberal Leader Jeremy Thorpe, already in Scotland, opened his campaign with a speech attempting to woo Scottish voters from their growing support for nationalism and their traditional allegiance to the Labor party.

Labor, he said, was in danger of losing "Its Mafia-type grip on Scotland, just as the Conservative influence waned in the late 1950s."

Wilson goes to Scotland Monday and Heath plans to address the Scots during the final week of the campaign.

After the February election, Labor held 40 Scottish seats in the 635-seat House of Commons, having lost two to nationalists. The Conservatives lost four rural strongholds to nationalists and ended up with 21 seats and the Liberals, although almost doubling their share of the vote, succeeded only in retaining their three Scottish seats.

Immolation Shows Saigon's Discontent

New York Times Service

SAIGON, South Vietnam — On the surface, it looks like fiery 1963, the last year of President Ngo Dinh Diem. With disquieting regularity, desperate men are dousing themselves with gasoline and burning to death on the streets of Saigon. In the last four months, six men — three of them war veterans — have immolated themselves in public. A seventh, a monk, was saved by the police on Sept. 2 as he burned in front of Saigon's rococco City Hall.

Yet the public's reaction to this carnage is silence, even cynicism. For instead of raging against the government, most of the suicides have purportedly been protests against "Communist aggression" in South Vietnam. Or so the government says.

Most of the deaths have followed a rather set pattern, soon after the human blaze peaks, the police and the government television crews arrive. The police scoop up letters left behind by the suicide victim.

Immediately, the government propaganda machinery swings into action. Radio and television spread the news of another "sacred torch of peace." In three cases, posters and banners featuring the martyrs' names, photographs and last, anti-Communist words have been draped and pasted around town.

After a 20-year-old disabled veteran, Le Quang Do, burned himself in front of the Presidential Palace, the Government spokesman, Pham Quoc Cuong, observed: "The sacrifice of combatant Le Quang Do should serve as a bright example to those who have been calling for peace while sitting in their air-conditioned rooms."

But except in the cases of two or possibly three of the suicides, few Saigon people believe that the spate of self-immolations has been altogether spontaneous.

"I cannot say firmly that here is or is not prearrangement for these deaths," said Dinh Tran Thu, the secretary general of South Vietnam's main veterans' group. But Thu said flatly that the Government had excerpted the suicide letters to give them an exclusively anti-Communist cast.

Tran Tam, a former Presidential candidate, said after the suicide of Phan Van Lua on Aug. 15: "The police were around all morning. The man took so much time to pour the gasoline on himself — and no one raised a hand. This is monstrous. Everyone knows they are victims."

U.S. ECONOMIST RAPS OIL POLICY

A United States economist Wednesday spoke out against his country's method of permitting recovery of oil or natural gas from the outer limits of the continental shelf.

Gregg Erickson, staff economist to the Committ on Interior and Insular Affairs of the U.S. Senate, told the British Columbia institute of economic policy analysis conference on mineral leasing that American practice since 1954 has been to sell off chunks of continental shelf to oil companies.

In recent years, the amounts of acreage offered on a sealed-bid basis have been growing, he said.

Erickson said bidding companies are offered no incentive to recover marginally-economic oil or gas yields. Companies calculate how high they can go in bidding in order to secure shelf property without overrunning their expected cash returns.

In order to hold overheads down, they aim at recovering only the most accessible oil and gas, he said.

Gang Buster 'Contract'

LONDON (Reuter) — Maltese police have warned the head of Scotland Yard's gang buster squad, Detective Chief Supt. Albert Wickstead, that the underworld has a "contract" out to kill him.

Wickstead, 48, told reporters: "I have had a few of these threats in my time, but this one I am taking very seriously."

Scotland Yard has taken special measures to protect Wickstead.

The warning from the Maltese police came while a murder trial here is pending, informed sources said. They said several key witnesses for the prosecution have been paid large sums not to come forward, or to change their evidence.

Amnesty Office Opens

WINNIPEG (CP) — A national office has been established in Winnipeg to provide information about President Ford's amnesty program to U.S. war resistors living in Canada.

Tim Maloney, Canadian coordinator for the Amnesty Information Counselling Support Service sponsored by the U.S. National Council of Churches, said today a toll-free telephone line will be established to the office manned by a staff of four.

Meantime, collect calls will be accepted at 774-9323, area code 204.

Maloney said the group is neither encouraging or discouraging individuals to accept the amnesty program.

"As an organization we would like to have seen a universal amnesty, or at least a more lenient program.

"But our chief concern now is that the people involved have access to all the information they need to make their decisions."

In any case, he advised draft evaders and deserters to wait about two weeks before taking any active steps because, he said, it will take that long for the regulations to be fully distributed in the U.S. and at border points.

Maloney said regional offices manned by a full-time staff member will be established in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver. In the interval, the organization is relying heavily on newspaper advertisements to get its message across.

The number of U.S. draft evaders and deserters now living in Canada is not known. The Canadian Council of Churches has put it between 60,000 and 80,000, an estimate Maloney said may be too high.

China Plans New Honors For Mao

TOKYO (UPI) — Mao Tse-tung will become head-of-state and supreme commander of all Chinese military forces under a new constitution expected to be adopted soon in Peking, Japanese newspapers said today.

The newspapers said the new constitution will be adopted at a meeting of the People's Congress in Peking this autumn.

Under the present constitution, which went into effect in 1954, China does not have the office of chief-of-state.

The new constitution apparently will describe Mao, 78, as "the great leader of the Chinese people and head-of-state of the proletarian dictatorship state as well as the supreme commander of all military forces."

The papers did not cite sources for the reports.

S. Korean N-Depots Security Tightened

SEOUL (WP) — U.S. military commanders have recently improved the security of tactical nuclear weapons based in South Korea but are resisting suggestions that they be removed from the country.

New electronic warning devices have been installed to supplement the chain link fences, special vapor lighting, guard towers and heavily built "Stradley" bunkers which protect the U.S. nuclear inventory only a short distance from Communist North Korea.

Recent questioning and criticism from Washington and inspections by officers from the U.S. mainland and Hawaii contributed to the growing awareness of nuclear security problems here.

Commanders were relieved when a special security unit responded quickly and successfully to a false alarm one night at a nuclear depot. Still they concede that room for improvement exists.

The nuclear weapons in South Korea are considered a particulary problem because of the unpredictable and sometimes bellicose regimes on both sides of the 38th parallel and the close proximity of weapons depots to the dividing line.

Depots are reported to be within 35 to 50 miles of the demilitarized zone — only a short hop by a North Korean army on the move.

According to informed sources, nuclear warheads have in the past been flown almost routinely to the edge of the DMZ by helicopter for training exercises.

Ottawa Wants Court Test Over Quebec TV Licence

PELLETIER
. . . "let's go"

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said Thursday the federal government is prepared to go to the courts to take up Quebec's challenge to Ottawa control of broadcasting and communications.

The long-simmering quarrel between Quebec and Ottawa came to a head when Quebec's Public Service board issued a cablevision licence without consulting the federal government or the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

Pelletier told newsmen on his way into cabinet Thursday and later at an impromptu press conference that there is a strong conviction in federal government circles that the action by Quebec was a violation of the federal Broadcasting act.

"I have already said, and I repeat what I said at the last federal-provincial conference on communications that if any violation of the act occurs we would feel obliged to take legal action," he said.

Ottawa is particularly incensed that the Quebec board's permit to Raymond D'Auteuil for the Rimouski-Mont Joli area, overlaps and conflicts with a cablevision licence issued by the CRTC to Francois Dionne.

The federal government had hoped to arrive with the province of Quebec at an understanding of an admistrative character that would have made it unnecessary to go before the courts, he said.

The question has been referred to the federal government's legal advisors. Officials in the justice department were examining the situation this week, he added.

Pelletier said the federal government would have preferred to avoid taking legal action while negotiations were still underway.

With regard to those who have received a Quebec permit the stand of Ottawa is that such a permit is invalid if it has not been ratified by the CRTC, Pelletier said.

"One thing is sure, we are not going to let down the people who have received a CRTC permit," he told reporters.

Because Ottawa regards the provincial permits as invalid the minister suggested it would be very imprudent on the part of broadcasters to invest funds at this time in such an operation because there appeared to be a clear conflict of jurisdictions.

Ottawa had been prepared to take the question to the courts in 1973. It now appeared that the Quebec government was determined to "provoke a situation before the courts" said Pelletier. He had only one reply to such provocation: "Let's go."

Italy's Coach Sacks Stars

ROME (AP) — Newly-appointed soccer manager Fulvio Bernardini has sacked Italy's most popular players in an effort to rejuvenate the country's national team.

Such stars as midfielders Gianni Rivera, Sandro Mazzola and Gigi Riva have been left out of the team by Bernardini, who said "I don't need them," after running a final test of their condition.

A number of changes were expected after Italy's mediocre showing in the World Cup in West Germany three months ago. In the first place it led to the dismissal of Ferruccio Valcareggi, who had managed the team for eight years carrying it to the European title in 1968 and to second place in the 1970 World Cup in Mexico.

New Tackle, Quarterback Join Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League said Thursday they have signed two imports to five-day trials.

The new players are quarterback Bill Bynum and offence tackle Bill Dulin. Both are National Football League cuts.

Bynum, is a six-foot, two-inch, 205-pound cut of St. Louis Cardinals. Dulin, a ninth-round draft choice of Dallas Cowboys, is six feet, six inches and weighs 245 pounds.

Lions meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Saturday, in Vancouver.

Radioactive Shipment Curbs Urged

WASHINGTON (WP) — A panel of experts appointed by the joint committee on atomic energy has recommended that stricter controls be placed on the transportation of radioactive materials especially radio-isotopes used in medicine — on commercial aircraft.

These stricter controls, the experts reported, are necessary to protect the health and safety of airplane passengers and crew members because of the growing number of shipments of radioactive material.

The experts recommended that the radiation limit for each package on a plane be reduced by 90 per cent and the total amount of radioactive material allowed on any one plane be cut by 80 per cent. The amount of radiation that cargo handlers can get in an hour should be cut by 25 per cent to 50 per cent.

The experts also recommended banning the shipment by air of plutonium — which is a key to the production of nuclear weapons and is so poisonous that inhaling even tiny amounts can be fatal.

"The danger of an aircraft accident and the resulting risk of contamination from plutonium is sufficiently grave so as to warrant their total restriction to ground and water transportation," the report said.

Plutonium is being shipped around the U.S. in increasing amounts because it is a by-product of enriched uranium atomic reactors. In addition the experts recommended that shippers of radioactive isotopes try harder to use ground transportation instead of airplanes.

The panel of experts was appointed by the joint committee last May. Most of the recommendations can be done by administrative orders.

FISH SOLD DIRECT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Faced with a decrease in the price fish processors will pay for tuna, fisherman Roy Robinson has started selling his catch directly to the public at prices well below the retail level.

Robinson said Wednesday canneries are offering fishermen $640 a ton tor tuna when they used to pay $785.

"We can't operate on these new prices," said Robinson, who fishes out of the municipality of Surrey with his sons on a 46-foot troller.

"All fish have come down in price but not down for the consumer. Not a dime."

Robinson lowered the consumer price on his own when he began selling tuna at 55 cents a pound on the waterfront in New Westminster.

Since last week, he has sold three tons of fish and expects to be sold out by this weekend.

"The response was so exciting," he said. "People who bought one fish came back for three or four more."

Robinson said local markets sell tuna for about $1.29 without the head while he sells whole fish which weigh between 10 and 25 pounds.

He said fishermen would need to get between $800 and $900 a ton for tuna to realize a fair return, adding he does not know why the processors lowered their prices.

DOWN FILLED JACKETS

A down filled jacket is your best buy for winter. Take it from the bird who wears one.

Canada's waterfowl could teach us all a lot about keeping warm. Because the waterfowl's natural down is the ultimate insulation — bar none.

Unlike synthetic insulators that form bulky matts, pure down feathers cling together gently, forming the "dead air" space that is the basis of insulation. At the same time, because down feathers are organic, they "breathe" — taking away excess body moisture.

The result is maximum warmth, minimum weight, and the finest insulation known to man (or bird, for that matter).

Down filled jackets are the waterfowl's gift to man — and the low sale price is the Bay's gift to you. The ski jacket shown here has a down filled body and sleeves, plus large interior pockets, snap-off hood, and wind-cheating collar and cuffs. In colours even nature would envy: navy, sky blue, and cardinal red. Sizes 36 to 46.

MAYORS TO BATTLE FOR LOVE, NOT WAR

There'll be lots of racket Sept. 28 when Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith and Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria meet in court for battle.

But the two civic leaders will fight for love, not war—the meet is planned in conjunction with the finals of the Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament and the official opening of the Henderson Park tennis courts.

The opening will take place at the park at 1 p.m. and will be followed immediately by finals of the boys' and girls' singles in the Times tournament — which drew some 130 entrants from Greater Victoria.

At 2 p.m. it will be Smith vs. Pollen in the Battle of the Mayors, with 3 p.m. slated for men's and women's singles finals and presentation of trophy prizes by Times publisher Stuart Underhill.

Greg Miller, president of the Vancouver Island Lawn Tennis Association, will act as master of ceremonies for the event.

Demands 'Out of Proportion'

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Time Staff

Saanich School District teachers will seek a 21.8 per cent pay increase for 1975, agreements chairman John Costin said today.

Such a demand would be "really out of proportion to other increases," school board vice-chairman Ann Foerster responded.

The 315 teachers in the district will ask for a cost of living clause in addition to the increase, Costin said.

The figure is in line with the 20 to 25 per cent increase that B.C. Teachers' Federation president Jim MacFarlan predicted Thursday B.C. teachers would be seeking.

Costin said 13.1 per cent of the increase requested will simply cancel out the rise in the cost of living in the Victoria area. The teachers' share of the increase in Canada's gross national product is represented by 7.3 per cent, he said.

The rest, 1.4 per cent, is an increase to bring salaries of Saanich district teachers in line with the rest of the province.

Costin said the real issue this year will be who the teachers bargain with, Saanich school board or the B.C. School Trustees Association.

The Saanich board, and 68 other boards, have delegated their bargaining rights for teachers' salaries to the BCSTA. They want bargaining done by the two provincial bodies, not district by district.

Costin said the Saanich teachers have invited the BCSTA's negotiating team to begin bargaining Thursday morning at the school board office. He hasn't yet received a reply.

Trustee Foerster said wage demands such as the Saanich teachers are making "add fuel to the flame of inflation."

She said the board may be involved in some of the non-monetary items to be negotiated, but will leave all salary bargaining to the BCSTA.

Greater Victoria Teachers' Association won't decide what increase it will seek until next month, president Mavis DeGirolamo said.

'Rezoning' Definition Argued

What is actually meant by the word "rezoning" in B.C.'s Municipal Act, and does a city-initiated change in the regulations for any particular zone category constitute a rezoning?

The questions were argued with conflicting interpretations and conclusions in a B.C. Supreme Court hearing Thursday, which is expected to test a controversial Municipal Act amendment and influence the future handling of zoning procedures throughout the province.

E. J. Butler and Co. Ltd. and Garden City Motels Ltd., owners of four motels on Gorge Road — Oxford Tower Inn, Coachman Inn, Redwood Park Motel and Robin Hood Motel — launched proceedings against the city of Victoria claiming the city had contravened the act's requirements by failing to notify the motel owners before changing motel zoning regulations last March.

The bylaw amended the regulations for the city's T1 (transient accommodation) zone to permit motel-type operations with 100 beds or more to have pub licences.

The plaintiffs' statement of claim said the only Gorge motel meeting the 100-unit requirement, the Sherwood Park Motor Hotel, in fact had been operating a pub illegally for about a year before the regulations were changed, and therefore the bylaw effectively legitimized that practice.

Sherwood Park's pub "affected and continues adversely to affect" neighboring motels and has depreciated their property values, the statement claimed.

Douglas Gray, representing the motel firms, and Jakob de Villiers, Victoria's city solicitor, agreed in submissions before Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton Thursday that a ruling hinged on the interpretation of the word "rezoning" contained in a 1973 amendment to the Municipal Act.

The amendment, strongly criticized by municipal officials on grounds that it complicates and encumbers the zoning process, requires municipalities to notify by mail all "occupiers" of property potentially affected by a rezoning or land-use contract application.

Gray said such notification wasn't given in regard to the changed motel zone regulations, but it should have been because any change to a zone itself or to the land uses permitted in that zone constitutes a rezoning.

He argued that if the city wished to change the permitted land use in any specific area it had only two choices: to transfer the area from its present zoning classification to a new one, or to pass a bylaw changing the regulations governing present land use within the zone. In either case, the action would amount to a rezoning.

For the city, however, de Villiers claimed that the ordinary meaning of rezoning implied changing the "geographical identity" of an area, by taking it out of one zone and placing it in another.

In the case of the Gorge Road motel regulations, he said, the bylaw challenged by the plaintiffs merely effected a "minor change" to permit the sale of liquor as an ancillary use to the zone's primary use, tourist accommodation.

"If the bylaw had gone so far as to prohibit the use of the zone for accommodation purposes and had entirely changed the character of the zone then there would be substance for the argument that council in fact rezoned the area," de Villiers stated.

In brief rebuttal of de Villiers' argument, Gray said the revised regulations were more significant in their repercussions than had been implied, and had resulted in a "very substantial change" to the character of the neighborhood.

Wootton is expected to hand down his judgment within two weeks.

A PASSIVE COUP took place in Victoria's Royal London Wax Museum Tnursday, with Michelle Poulson (right) single-handedly unseating a U.S. president — Richard Nixon complete with waxy pre-Watergate smile — and Teresa Edwards installing his more sober-faced successor, Gerald Ford. "And that, as far as we're concerned, seems to wrap up the whole ball of wax," joked one onlooker.

Car Bodyshops Raise Rates; Clients to Pay

Automobile bodyshops in Victoria will raise their rates $2 an hour Oct 1 and customers will have to pay the extra charge, the Victoria president of the Automotive Retailers Association said today.

Dennis Butner, bodyshop manager of National Motors, said the labor rate will rise from $14 to $16 per hour in the 37 ARA-affiliated garages in Victoria Oct. 1.

"We have no quarrel with the Insurance Corporation of B.C., but the rates must be higher for us to operate at a reasonable profit," Butner said.

He said that as of Oct. 1, unless the ICBC agrees to the rate hike, the $2 per hour extra rate will be charged to customers.

"We'll make out the work order using the $16 per hour rate for labor and the differential will have to be paid by the customer."

In Vancouver, Lloyd Kinneard, secretary-manager of the B.C. ARA, said the rate hikes will affect garages in the Fraser Valley, the Okanagan and the Cariboo, as well as Greater Victoria.

Vancouver garages are not expected to raise their rates.

Kinneard said rising material costs and a shortage of skilled bodymen have caused the need for the price increase.

ICBC plans no immediate action to deal with the impending hike, a spokesman for the Crown agency said Thursday.

He said the corporation is conducting a study of bodyshop rates and no action is expected until the study is completed.

"We want to find out to what extent bodyshop operators may be in trouble and to what extent rate increases may be justified," he said.

No indication was given how long the study would take.

COPTER RESCUES STRANDED HUNTER

A deer stalker who twisted his leg and became stranded beside a creek bed 1,500 feet below a ridge he was hunting late Thursday was airlifted to a Victoria hospital by RCMP helicopter this morning.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said Clair Waterworth, believed to be in his 40's, of 643 Kelly in Colwood, became separated from his partner, Jack Lewis, of the same address, while the two were hunting in the Bear Creek area between Shawnigan and Port Renfrew.

A police spokesman said Lewis spotted a camp fire at the base of the ridge and alerted police and rescue authorities in Shawnigan and Duncan.

But rough terrain and windy conditions prevented Waterworth's removal until daybreak, he said.

The injured hunter, tired and thirsty after a sleepless night, was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where his condition at noon today was listed as good.

OAK BAY SPARES BOULEVARD OAK

One of Oak Bay's older residents, an oak tree on the boulevard at 1440 Beach Drive, was spared Thursday by the municipal council's B committee.

Edith J. Olson of 1440 Beach wrote the committee complaining that the tree spoiled the view of Mt. Baker from her fifth-floor apartment, and asking that it be pruned and the top cut off.

Municipal engineer Geoff White warned that if the tree were lopped off to improve the fifth-floor view, fourth and third-floor apartment dwellers may also want it cut.

The request was denied.

Vic West to Discuss Community Centre

Members of the Victoria West Community Development Assocation will meet with city officials Monday to discuss location and other details of the proposed community centre to be built under Neighborhood Improvement Program funds.

Nearly 80 per cent of the 843 Victoria West residents surveyed nominated a community centre as the area's top priority for spending its share of the $2 million in NIP funds allocated to Vic West and James Bay.

After results of the survey were announced at an association meeting Thursday, Ald. Bill Tindall predicted city council would go along with the group's major proposals.

According to the survey, residents generally favor locating the centre in Banfield Park, although the association has indicated it prefers Vic West Park.

Among other recommendations, the association is urging city council to designate the whole of Vic West as a neighborhood improvement area, to make all residents eligible for low-interest loans to renovate their homes.

Anti-Marina Blitz Eyed

The Tsawout Indian Band will start an area-wide blitz Monday to get signatures on a petition opposing the planned Saanichton Bay Marina.

Band manager Gus Underwood Jr., said today the petition will be taken door-to-door in Central Saanich and put in stores, garages all over the Victoria area. He said members of other Indian bands in the area had agreed to take the form to work with them.

More than 75 people from the Tsawout and other Indian bands in the area attended a meeting on the East Saanich reserve Thursday night and mapped out plans for the petition blitz.

Underwood said the petition will be presented to the provincial government and to marina developer George Wheaton.

He emphasized that it was not only the Tsawout Band which was opposing the 1,130-berth marina proposal, but other Central Saanich residents and other Indian bands which also depend on the bay for fishing and hunting.

Underwood said Resources Minister Bob Williams, who must give approval for the granting of a foreshore lease to the developers, has agreed to meet with the Tsawout Band, other groups opposing the project and citizens of Central Saanich.

A tentative meeting date has been set for Friday at 1 p.m.

A marine biologist from the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control (SPEC) in Vancouver is expected at the reserve later today to go over the impact studies that have already been done on the project and to look at the site.

Underwood said he is getting more calls and letters every day from people all over the Victoria area who are opposed to the project.

Turmoils Listed In Priory Trial

Counsel for the Society of the Love of Jesus said in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday he feels obliged to offer evidence the religious community has been in a state of turmoil for decades.

Cecil Branson said the society must answer the allegation by the five plaintiffs suing it that the present prioress, Mother Leonette Hoesing, has systematically tried to destroy the community since she took charge of it nine years ago.

He introduced a series of letters, some dating back 30 years, which detailed clashes between members and with church authorities.

Branson said his aim is to show the society, founded in 1922 and transferred from Anglican to Roman Catholic church in 1936, was "built on a bed of sand" and has been in repeated turmoil.

The situation left Mother Leonette with "an impossible task," he said.

The society, which has assets estimated at $1.5 million, operates an extended care hospital and home for the aged at St. Mary's Priory in Langford.

Plaintiffs in the case, who have been called the "traditional" faction in the long-standing internal dispute, include Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd, 85, the society's founder and its prioress for 39 years. She retired in 1961 because of ill health and now operates an animal shelter at Mill Bay.

The "modern" faction includes Mother Hoesing and has the backing of the Roman Catholic Church.

Earlier in the day, Sister Mary Agnes Eaton, one of the plaintiffs, denied having stolen some notes from the priory room of Hoesing, saying she took them because she believed they might be important to the court case.

She also denied that letters produced by Branson from church files constituted complaints but at one point Mr. Justice H. C. McKay interjected to note: "the picture I have is of a very unhappy community."

The trial, at the Law Courts, enters its 10th day Monday.

Hush Surrounds Spectacle Lake

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

There are not many parks near urban areas where you can get away from the sound of traffic, but tucked away in hilly Malahat is Spectacle Lake where you are more likely to hear the call of kingfishers than the whining of motor cars.

The small provincial park, situated 600 feet above sea level, is accessible via an unpaved road located on the west side of the Trans-Canada Highway about 2,500 feet passed the Shawnigan Lake cutoff.

A tree belt, plus its distance — about a mile — from the highway, is probably the reason why so little man-made noise is heard in the park.

According to Indian legends, the powerful mythical creature Thunderbird and his sons lived in the Malahat and Spectacle Lake was their source of water supply.

And Malahat Indians claim before the white man destroyed the magic of Spectacle Lake by logging its big trees and cutting up the landscape with roads, the water had curative powers.

Bike Mishap Injures Two

Two young men were taken to hospital Thursday night after the motorcycle they were riding left Esquimalt Road and landed in a gully.

City police said today the motorcyclist was Samuel Essler, 22, of 3319 Whittier, and his passenger Reginald Belfitt, 20, of 1045 Rockland.

Essler was treated for bruises at Victoria General Hospital and released, but Belfitt was still in hospital today suffering from a fractured leg.

Police estimated damage to the motorcycle at $1,000.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Winning Habit On Gardens Ice

TORONTO (CP) — Team Canada coach Billy Harris and those Canadians who arrange international hockey schedules might do well to set up more dates at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Team Canada '74 romped to a 4-1 win over the Soviet Union national team Thursday, marking the second time in a row that a Canadian professional side has knocked off a Russian club at the Gardens.

In 1972, Team Canada, made up of National Hockey League all-stars, won by an identical score—the only game they won in Canada.

Normally a bastion of NHL sophistication, a sellout crowd of almost 16,500 cheered wildly at the Canadians from the World Hockey Association who moved into a 3-0 lead and were rarely pressed afterwards.

Bobby Hull, Andre Lacroix, Ralph Backstrom and J. C. Tremblay scored for the Canadians and Alexander Yakushev for the Russians.

The only time the Russians threatened was early in the third period when they had an apparent goal disallowed by Canadian referee Tom Brown.

Team Canada was ahead 3-1 when Brown ignored the red goal light that flashed moments after Vladimir Petrov apparently beat goaltender Gerry Cheevers.

"That wasn't a disputed goal," said Soviet coach Boris Kulagin in a post-game interview. "It was an undisputed goal."

Harris said the Soviets could count the goal, "and that would make the score 4-2."

Brown wasn't sure he had made the right call, but after consulting with the goal judge and his linesman, he ruled no goal.

The Russians asked him to reconsider his decision after reviewing the play on a television monitor beside the Russian bench.

Brown refused, an action which later was commended by Vern Buffey, WHA referee-in-chief responsible for co-ordinating the officials for this eight game series that resumes Saturday afternoon in Winnipeg.

Team Canada holds a one-game lead after two games following a 3-3 tie Tuesday at Quebec City.

"There's no way they (referees) can rely on television replays for judgments," said Buffey, adding that he thought Brown had called an "excellent game."

Asked later if he had considered pulling his team off the ice after the disputed goal, Kulagin said: "No. We have high respect for spectators and are well aware that they pay to see the game."

Team Canada could have doubled the score except for the superb goaltending of Vladislav Tretiak.

Yakushev ended Canadian goalie Gerry Cheever's shutout bid at 13:09 of the second period.

The Canadians, employing a four-line system that allows them to skate with the younger Soviet players in short, quick bursts, still are not favorites to win the series.

But their crowding tactics appear to have upset the patterned Soviet system and, unlike the 1972 squad, this Canadian team is not adverse to laying on the stick and elbows in the corners.

Canada outshot the Russians 33-30, with their widest margin in the second period, 16-8.

Cheevers and Howe May Miss Game 3

TORONTO (CP) — News that Gerry Cheevers' father-in-law had suffered a heart attack cast a shadow over the Team Canada dressing room Thursday night moments after a 4-1 victory over the Soviet Union in the second of their eight-game series.

Cheevers, who reached the room late because he was honored after the game as Canada's top player, left quickly, escorted by a policeman.

"Sorry, fellas, no questions please," said Cheevers, who is not expected to play Saturday afternoon at Winnipeg in the third game of the series.

Cheevers' father-in-law, John Giacomi, was in serious condition in hospital.

The news delayed the arrival of Team Canada coach Billy Harris at a news conference with Gordie Howe and Boris Kulagin, Russian head coach.

Canada's players refused to second-guess referee Tom Brown of Scarborough, Ont., who ruled that a Russian shot early in the third period did not go in the net. A television replay appeared to show otherwise. If the shot had counted, Canada would have led only 3-2.

Forwards Andre Lacroix and Bruce MacGregor described the game as much tougher physically than the opening game, a 3-3 tie Tuesday night at Quebec City.

"The ice was soft, the kind that wears you down," said MacGregor, a diligent defensive standout. "Right now, I'm exhausted. But a good night's rest . . . and we'll be ready Saturday afternoon."

Harris said he anticipated several changes for Saturday's game, but he wouldn't say what the shifts will be.

Among those likely to be missing is Gordie Howe, who played two shifts and set up Canada's opening goal before retiring with bruised ribs. He was released from hospital after x-rays showed no breaks.

"Maybe I'm getting too old for this game," said the 46-year-old veteran, who received a thunderous standing ovation from the 16,485 fans before the game.

After Howe left, Team Canada was forced to work basically with three lines. That left his son, Mark, and Ralph Backstrom to concentrate on penalty-killing, where they did a superb job.

Mike Walton, who was beaten by Vladislav Tretiak on a second-period penalty shot, gave the Russian netminder full credit for the save.

"I thought I might try to pull him out, but the ice was bumpy so I decided to shoot it. He was further out than I thought and the angle was covered.

"He made an outstanding save. He made several."

Maloney's Computer Tuned In On Two Clubs

If it wasn't already perfectly clear to members of the Vancouver Canucks, coach Phil Maloney put it squarely on the line this week. For the Canucks, it's strictly a three-team fight in the National Hockey League this year; and, all other factors being equal, that's precisely the way Maloney is going to play the season.

It was at the tag end of the "meet-Kurtenbach" press conference, the ex Vancouver captain now being the embryo coach of the Seattle Totems of the central Hockey League, where the over-simplification on how to be a success was explained.

Maloney was talking about players generally. Then he dropped a hint and it landed hard enough to be heard by everybody. "The team we have today may not be the team we start the season with," he warned. "There is nothing imminent," he hastened to explain, "but we've got to know where we are going, and to do it we are going to have to evaluate our position."

It has generally been conceded that the big strength in the Canucks this year lies in the fact that many of their younger players will be one year older, which isn't hard to figure, but by that extra year they also have gained the valuable experience the Canucks feel is necessary to at least qualify for a playoff berth this season.

And as there have been no big trades to speak of, and player surprises either, the Canucks appear set on last year's basis, with the exception that they have lost a centre and a captain in Kurtenbach, as Maloney said, "that's no plus."

Evaluation Is Constant

Of course, Jim Wiley, ex of Pittsburgh, is the man designed to fill Kurt's shoes at centre ice and based on all reports he should fit the bill. Otherwise the Canucks are hopefully seeking a few surprises from training camp but, if none appear, it could be virtually the same club which finished last year. Except for that latest Maloney warning.

Maloney explained that although there were no imminent trades, he constantly had to keep evaluating the club's position as it related specifically to two clubs, to determine if the talent is sufficient to gain that playoff birth.

"St. Louis and Minnesota are the two clubs we have to worry about," he said. What have they done? What have we done? We have to know."

The point is that Maloney conceded Chicago is a better team than any other in their division, and that Kansas City, as an expansion club, shouldn't be one to worry about. So, the mark has to be Minnesota, or St. Louis, or both. It's that simple.

They are the clubs the Canucks will have to beat during the season and how they have improved themselves is of the utmost concern.

"I can't be concerned with Boston, or Philadelphia or Montreal," he added. "Just those two."

So it's strictly an intra-divisional analytical theme he's working on. Which is undoubtedly why there is no immediate plan to change from any of last year's line combinations. "And you don't really think of it after only three days of training," he suggested.

Slimming Is Beautiful

Then a case in point. He mentioned the Gerry O'Flaherty, Dave Dunn, Greg Boddy line, a unit which was formed near the end of last season, and turned out to be an instant hit, especially defensively, and a pleasant surprise otherwise as well.

"Is it worth tampering with?" he asked. "Will it get us more scoring power? Maloney wasn't sure and by the same token he declined to suggest any other line switches until he knows more of his needs for the season.

"We know the personnel we have now and that lessens the possible combinations we might have," he analyzed.

However, nothing was ruled out. "You don't get any points for winnisg those exhibition games, so maybe there will be some experiments. Like in baseball: so what if you win the Grapefruit League?"

So Maloney will look and then decide, such as in goal. He admitted the Canucks needed a backup for Gary Smith, the ex Maple Leaf, and that he had several, in fact, to pick from. And two of those, Gary McLelland and Ken Lockett just might get their chance on Saturday against Los Angeles. Everyone will get a fair shot, he had stated earlier.

And about Smith, an enigma at times, Maloney quickly admitted he was particularly pleased that Gary had showed up much trimmer than last year.

"I was pleased to see his weight down," he said. "He came to camp at 217 this year. That's a plus. Last year, what was he?" The question was redundant, but it brought a voluntary response nonetheless.

"He was 235," a voice said.

Maloney had made another point.

Heat's Off Ottawa And on Argos Now

TORONTO (CP) — Quarterback Jerry Keeling collaborated with Rhome Nixon and Gerry Organ Thursday night to lead Ottawa Rough Riders to a 29-12 Eastern Football Conference win over Toronto Argonauts who finally hit rock bottom.

There were 32,081 fans at the CNE stadium, but their hearts were elsewhere as they watched the Argonauts tumble into last place and the Riders claim third.

The Riders, Canadian Football League defending champions, now have eight points, while the Argos have managed only three victories in 10 games.

Keeling, whose arm has been suspect this season, passed for two touchdowns to Nixon, while Organ reeled off five field goals and two converts. One of Keeling's passes was for 68 yards and the other for four.

A two-yard run by Ed Shuttlesworth produced the only touchdown for the Argonauts. It was converted by Zenon Andrusyshyn, who also kicked a field goal and a single point. Toronto gained another point when Shuttlesworth fumbled into the Ottawa end zone and the ball was recovered by Riders' Wayne Tosh.

The fans, many carrying transistor radios—and some even portable television sets—did little cheering for the football teams, but broke into a roar each time Team Canada scored against the Soviet Union in the international exhibition hockey game at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Keeling said he thought the victory would ease the barrage of criticism of the Riders in recent weeks—by Ottawa coaches as well as their supporters.

"Yeah, we've been feeling a little heat," said Keeling. "All of us. It might be off for two or three days now."

Wayne Giardino, switched from linebacker to a rushing fullback for the Riders, covered 75 yards in 16 carries. He caught four passes for another 31 yards.

"But I'm ready to go back to defence," said Giardino. "Offence is fine, but I like defence and at 30 years of age I don't plan to start another career."

He may still be on offence, however, when the Riders play Saskatchewan Roughriders in Ottawa Sunday afternoon.

Extreme Fire Danger Prompts Gate Closures

It might be a good idea to forget hunting and freshwater fishing for the weekend.

Due to the high fire hazard, all gates in the Sooke Combined Fire Organization area (south of the Port Renfrew-Shawnigan Lake Road) will be shut and the access roads will be patroled. Pacific Logging, B.C. Forest Products and Western Forest Industries within the Lake Cowichan Organization of logging companies are also shut down and most other companies will likely follow suit.

So, unless we get a lot of rain, stick to the salmon fishing.

Chinooks up to 19 pounds, with most in the five to eight pound range, are being caught all over Finlayson Arm. Konrad Gudmundseth topped fishermen, tying into a bunch of coho that showed up in the same area on Wednesday with a beauty weighing 14¼ pounds. Small spoons are the favored lure.

Hootchies, small plugs and bait have produced chinooks to 20 pounds and flies are bagging the odd coho right at daybreak between Bamberton and McCurdy Point.

Action has picked up considerably off Deep Cove, where fishermen using the four-inch white or pink buzz-bombs and one or two-ounce stingsildas are limiting out on coho and small chinooks near the Marker, Moses Point and in Satellite Channel.

★ ★ ★

Trial Island waters off Oak Bay are yielding chinooks to 15 pounds and the odd coho to 10 pounds on strip, 100 feet of line and two pounds of weight.

Activity has slowed down to a degree off the Victoria waterfront because of the great quantity of bait fish in the vicinity.

Persistent fishermen, however, are still managing to pick up coho weighing up to 12:12 and chinooks up to 14:05 while fishing with minnow at all depths between Brotchie Ledge and the Beacon Hill Park flagpole. Early morning and the tide change are best times to be on the water.

Coho up to 10½ pounds constitute the main catch off the Pedder Bay kelp bed. William Head and Race Rocks with the most success noted on strip, 12 to 16 ounces of weight and 60 to 80 feet of line.

Late afternoon has been the best time to fish Becher Bay with a roughly half-n-half mixture of coho to 14 pounds and chinooks to 32 pounds coming in from waters between Church Island and Beechey Head. Try using 60 to 85 feet of line and six to 16 ounces of weight with your favorite lure or bait.

Nobody has been fishing the Sooke area much since the weekend, when coho up to 17 pounds and chinooks up to 29 pounds were taken about half a mile off the bluffs near Secretary Island and in the vicinity of Otter and Sheringham Points.

Deep lines — 100 to 125 feet of line and up to two pounds of weight — with strip or minnow worked best.

Numerous fishermen in the Peder Bay to Sooke area returned from fishing trips with tales of the "big one that got away" and some had straightened hooks to back up their story.

You never know . . .

★ ★ ★

A few large coho are brightening an otherwise bleak picture for fishermen trying their luck in Cowichan Bay and Ansum Narrows.

Art Westdorp, who works down the hall, was one of the lucky ones. He landed a coho that tipped the scales at 18.01 pounds while fishing with super-strip and planer in front of the marina shore just before dawn Tuesday.

Strip-casting and trolling large strip has paid off right after dark near Nanaimo's White Marker with chinooks up to 25 pounds forming the main catch. Otherwise, consider the area poor.

Bucktailers off Qualicum are landing coho averaging six or seven pounds.

Lots of salmon are jumping right off Port Alberni — but not many are biting.

Better luck was noted down Alberni Inlet, near the mouth of Coleman Creek, where fishermen are picking up numerous jackalong with tyee and coho up to 12 pounds.

Anchors and buzz-bombers are landing coho up to the same size off the south end of Hornby Island. Other good catches were reported near Bates Beach.

Hot Orioles Making Up For Their Shaky Start

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles are flying north in the American League East and New York Yankees are going south.

Those teams appeared headed in those directions Thursday night following Baltimore's 7-0 rout of New York that gave the Orioles a half-game lead over the Yankees.

"We're just making up for some bad baseball earlier in the season," said Dave McNally after pitching the Orioles to their 18th victory in the last 23 games.

The Yankees, on the other hand, are making up for some good baseball late in the season. After a recent surge, the Yankees lost their third straight game to the Orioles.

Baltimore's suddenly revitalized pitching staff has had something to do with the Yankee turnout. The Orioles' pitchers gave New York just four runs in the three-game series at Yankee Stadium. McNally gave the Yankees only three hits.

"I had excellent control, by far the best I've had all year," said the left-hander.

In other American League games, Detroit Tigers defeated Boston Red Sox 3-1 and Kansas City Royals defeated Oakland A's 4-3 in 10 innings.

In the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates whipped St. Louis Cardinals 8-6; Chicago Cubs turned back Philadelphia Phillies 7-4; Los Angeles Dodgers bombed San Diego Padres 11-2 and Cincinnati Reds trimmed San Francisco Giants 8-4.

Don Baylor opened the scoring for Baltimore, smashing the first pitch of the fifth inning from Rudy May, 6-4, over the fence in left-centre.

The Orioles added two runs in the eighth inning on a run-scoring single by Paul Blair and an RBI double by Bobby Grich. They scored four more runs in the ninth, with Andy Etchebarren, Mark Belanger and Tommy Davis each singling in a run and Grich knocking in another with a grounder.

Vernon Ruhle pitched two-hit ball for seven innings in his first major league start and Al Kaline closed in on 3,000 lifetime hits with a run-scoring single, lifting Detroit over Boston. The Red Sox' loss left them in third place, three games behind the Orioles.

Ruhle, a 20-year-old graduate of Olivet College in Michigan, beat Boston veteran Luis Tiant, who failed for the sixth straight time to gain his 21st victory.

Kaline got his 2,997th major league hit when he singled home a run in the first inning.

Rookie Fred Lynn tied the game for the Red Sox with a home run in the second inning, but then the Tigers won it on Jim Nettles' two-run triple in the fourth.

Amos Otis singled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning, giving Kansas City its victory over Oakland. The loss reduced the A's lead in the American League West to 4½ games over the idle Texas Rangers.

Willie Stargell hit a two-run double and Richie Hebner added a three-run homer, keying a seventh-inning rally that lifted Pittsburgh over St. Louis. The victory moved the Pirates within a half-game of the first-place Cardinals.

Griffins Capture Opener

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Rochester Griffins built up a first-period 8-3 lead and went on to defeat Philadelphia Wings 15-12 Thursday in the opening game of the National Lacrosse League best-of-seven final series before 10,103 fans.

Second game of the series is scheduled for Saturday afternoon in Philadelphia.

Griffins, who finished in second place during the regular season, received a four-goal performance from Al Gordoneer. He now has 12 goals in seven playoff games.

Graeme Gair, Kevin Parsons and Brian Wilson fired two goals apiece, while singles were shared by Victoria's Glen Neuman, Rick Bisson, Bill Hoculik, Tom Phair and Dave Wilson.

Larry Lloyd, John Grant and Terry Rowland scored two goals each for Philadelphia.

Blazers Lose Out In Bid for Wayne

TORONTO (CP) — Wayne Carleton has ben traded to New England Whalers for a second-round draft choice and future considerations, Toronto Toros announced Thursday.

Carleton finished sixth in World Hockey Association scoring last season with 37 goals and 55 assists. He had asked to be traded by the Toros because he apparently did not see eye-to-eye with coach Billy Harris last season. Additionally, it has been rumored he was annoyed that he was not asked to play with Team Canada.

Toros said they had talked with a number of WHA clubs about Carleton, including Vancouver Blazers.

Carleton, named captain of the Toros last year, was said to be the third highest-paid player in the league after signing a three-year contract last season. The only two with bigger contracts were super stars Gordie Howe and Bobby Hull.

Ginnell Bids For McDill In New Deal

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Derek Haas may use his veto powers to nullify one of Victoria Cougars' trades but manager-coach Pat Ginnell has another one going that may bring a proven right winger to the Western Canada Hockey League club.

Haas informed Ginnell he doesn't want to play in the WCHL and refused to report for training. On Wednesday, Cougars dealt the 19-year-old centre to Calgary Centennials in exchange for centre Lyle Murray and defenceman John Beardsworth.

Thursday Haas informed Calgary coach Scotty Munro he won't change his mind and will remain in his home town of Trail.

If that deal falls through, Ginnell has higher hopes of another that may bring Jeff McDill to Victoria from Flin Flon Bombers.

Ginnell has offered Flin Flon coach Mel Pearson four players in exchange for McDill, a right winger who scored 22 goals and 14 assists for Bombers last year. Ginnell, who left for Calgary today and a league governors' meeting, is expected to finalize the trade at the weekend.

Before leaving for Calgary, Ginnell also planned to name players destined to start with the Cougars and those ticketed for assignment to the affiliate Nanaimo Clippers.

Nanaimo's B.C. Junior League team is scheduled to play Kamloops Chiefs of the WCHL in an exhibition game at Nanaimo Saturday night. The Chiefs then will play Cougars at Memorial Arena on Sunday and Monday.

The players vying for jobs with the Cougars turned serious in an intra-squad game at the Arena Thursday. The Reds skated to a 5-3 victory over the Whites in a game marred by several fights.

Mel Bridgeman scored two third-period goals to pace Reds, who also got goals from Rick Peter, Danny Lucas and Tim Williams.

John Entzminger scored twice for the Whites and John Gordon added the other.

Putter Helps Rhyan

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Veteran Dick Rhyan has the lead in the Ohio Kings Island open golf tournament after a spectacular putting round Thursday staked the Columbus, Ohio, resident to a six-under-par 65.

Rhyan, 38, who joined the tour in 1964 and has played steadily since 1969, has yet to win and has career money winnings of $83,000 — much les than expenses.

He one-putted half his greens and holed long putts of 35, 20, 20 and 20 feet for a three-stroke lead on the field — and six on the man he figures he has to beat.

That's Jack Nicklaus, defending champion and favorite for the $30,000 first prize.

"It just wasn't all there," said Nicklaus, the golf superstar entered in this late-season event. "I've got to get it closer to the hole."

Big Weekend for the Paddle Set

One of the main events on racing canoists' calendars takes place on the mainland this weekend.

It's the 40-mile Simon Fraser race which will be run in four legs, beginning at the Rosedale-Agassiz bridge 10 a.m. Saturday.

It will end at Fort Langley about 4 p.m. Sunday.

Several Victoria enthusiasts will take in this one, including Stan and Sylvia Luzzi, Allan and Willy Roger, Keith and Diane Bell, and Peter Chapman.

The annual Gorge races held on the weekend were worthwhile working-up trials for those competing in the Simon Fraser and attracted some formidable competition from Vancouver, Washington and Oregon.

Fred Pritzer of Vancouver teamed with Keith Bell to win the senior men's event. Stan Luzzi and Peter Chapman placed second and in third spot were Wayne McNab of Vancouver and Mike Kidd.

Carla Bollegraaf and Lee McNab won the senior women's event, beating out Lois Thompson and Caroline Bailey of Washington. In third place were Mary Sue Miller and Rosemary Coulton.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

The mixed event was won by Mike and Melody Beyer of Oregon. Fred Pritzer and Carla Bollegraaf came second, Bruce and Paula Boer of Oregon finishing third.

Dave Vanhumbeck and Tim Bent were top in junior men competition. Larry Briggs and Joe Craveiro placed second, edging Phil Jordan and Kevan Craven.

Robert McInnes won the centennial race. Kit and Wilf Harper were second and John and Jane Harding third.

The 327 racing class was won by Mike Beyer and Bruce Boer, Fred Pritzer and Keith Bell coming in second. The Washington crew of John Borrecco and Ned Dimock placed third.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association begins its winter racing season Sunday with a couple of around-the-buoys races in waters off Oak Bay Marina. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Competing boats have until the end of December to get a valid Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet rating.

Arbitrary ratings will be given such boats by THSA, meanwhile, but boat owners would be wise to apply for a PHRF one as soon as possible. If you're in need of one give the fleet captain Rich Heatherington a ring. His number is 386-0660.

★ ★ ★

Sunday will also signal another season of racing for the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

Keel boats will have a 10-miler course off Esquimalt and two races are scheduled for centreboarders. Racing gets under way around 10 a.m.

A 30-foot sloop off the drawing board of Britton Chance, the man who designed the 12-metres Mariner and France, won the Thermopylae Race, sailed off the Victoria coastline on Sunday.

Rod Andrews and Hugh Bacon bought the Chance 30 in April and Sunday was her third race under the partnership. Shortly after they bought her, Rod and Hugh cleaned up in Seattle's Double Bluff. Their second race was Seattle's Great Equalizer in which they earned a creditable fourth in their division.

One of the most popular performances Sunday, however, was the sixth place won by Ned Ashe's Mint., Mint was also first in division III. This was Ned's first competition in a long time. Ned proved to a lot of the youngsters out there that skill and experience still counts.

Others placing in the top third of the fleet were:

Frank Rhodes' Pax, second; Glen Higgins' Freeway, third; Greg Oliver's Distant Drummer, fourth; Steve Merrimin's Vandal II, seventh; Jan Huibers' Sea Spell, eighth; Rod McBride's Lemdo, ninth and John Mallesons Sunday, 10th.

Canuck Goalie Goes to Buffalo

Jacques Caron may see a little more action with Buffalo Sabres in the National Hockey League than he saw in the past two seasons with Vancouver Canucks.

Canucks, still in training at Memorial Arena where they tackle Los Angeles Kings in an exhibition game at 7 p.m., Saturday, sent Caron to Sabres on Thursday for future considerations. Vancouver will receive $40,000 if he makes the Buffalo squad.

This leaves a wide-open race for the back-up netminder spot with Canucks.

Veteran Gary Smith is the only goalie left who spent last season with Vancouver club. Ed Dyck, who shared backup duties with Caron last season, has moved to the new Indianapolis entry in the World Hockey Association.

Leading contenders for the position include Dan Brady and Bruce Bullock, who shared netminding duties with Seattle Totems in the Western Hockey League last season, and Dave McLelland, who recorded a 2.85 goals-against average while working for Des Moines in the International League.

Gary Bromley, who has played only 12 NHL games, was left as the only Sabre goalie with major league experience at their training camp in St. Catherines, Ont. Roger Crozier is having a recurring health problem and Rocky Farr complained of soreness in his left thigh after a Thursday practice and has been sent to Buffalo for a medical examination.

Canadian With An Evel Scheme

HAMILTON (CP) — Ken Carter, formerly of Montreal and now living in Florida, says he plans an Evel Knievel-style border crossing July 4, 1976.

He plans to soar across Lake Champlain from Miranda, Que., to Champlain, N.Y., a distance of about a mile, in a rocket-powered car.

"If I fail, I die . . . it's as simple as that," said Carter, nursing a broken right leg suffered in a recent attempt to jump over 12 cars in another car.

"No ripoffs, no pulling the cord early. If I don't make it to the other side, just start dredging the water."

The 37-year-old daredevil said he will hit a ramp going 300 miles an hour and hopes to land on the other side on a specially-prepared bed of roses.

He will use a standard car equipped with brakes, headlamps, tail-lights, rearview mirror — and the rocket-powered engine — he added.

The car will be slowed by two drag parachutes to soften the landing, but the car will be too low for the chutes to save him if anything goes wrong, he said.

He earns about $150,000 a year leaping over cars, trucks and buses and said money is not the motivation for his planned leap.

He and Evel Knievel used to work the shows together.

"He'd jump 11 trucks on his bike, and I'd jump 12 in my car, that kind of thing."

DISABLED veteran of 20 years in the U.S. Army, former sergeant Allen Davis looks over his collection of 22 medals at his Willingsboro, N.J., home. Davis plans to return them to President Ford as a protest over the draft-evasion amnesty program.

Confession in the Kitchen

people

CHICAGO — A Catholic priest hears confessions from some of the kitchen help while performing his duties as a chef in a Chicago restaurant.

Rev. Richard Bernowski, 33, is the night chef at Sage's East. During the day he teaches history at St. Francis Theological Seminary.

"Many of the waitresses and kitchen help are Catholics and I hear confessions from them while we are on duty," he said.

TORONTO — Col. R. H. Hilborn lent his alarm clock to the Queen Mother on her visit to Toronto last June.

And, when she could not shut the alarm off one morning, he recounts, she tucked it under her pillow for fear that "plainclothes policemen behind every bush" might come running.

"Why didn't you heave it out the window, Ma'am?" he asked.

"I had to return it to you in working order," she replied.

HOLLYWOOD — Billy Graham opened a special three-day celebration Thursday to mark the 25th anniversary of the tent meeting that transformed him from a country preacher into a world-wide evangelist.

BROOKSVILLE, Fla. — "You can't imagine how helpless you feel," said Bob Putnam after the earth caved in around him, devouring $100,000 worth of equipment, including a 36-foot drilling rig. Putnam was one of three men drilling a test well for water when a 300-foot-wide sink-hole opened up in the sand hills near this central Florida community Thursday. Within 10 minutes, the cavern had swallowed everything but the men and their little Jeep.

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Mrs. Gerry Dennington wants to blow the whistle on crime in her neighborhood. Mrs. Dennington has founded the "Whistle Packin' Mamas." Each member will be armed with a whistle. If a member notices a crime, she explained, the woman cuts loose with a blast from her whistle.

TORONTO — Mayor Mel Lastman of North York said Thursday he wants his council and the province to sponsor a study into the relationship between violence and environment in Metropolitan Toronto. Lastman's committee, on violence has issued a report saying "much of the recently-built housing accommodation in North York has serious flaws which help to encourage crime and violence" such as long, narrow hallways, poorly-lit stairwells and underground garages.

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — A Bible cradled in his arm, Rev. Ezra Graley walked through the jailhouse door into a crowd of weeping, hymn-singing followers. "We are defending God and his people," he said. Graley, released on bond Thursday, pledged to carry on a crusade against a new series of school books he believes are objectionable and called on fellow protesters to avoid violence.

GRATELEY, England — Kevin Keogh joined the army to see Hong Kong and wound up in Belfast. "I'm thinking of suing the army under the Trade Descriptions Act," which prohibits false or misleading advertising, his father said Thursday.

"He was getting all excited at the thought of the Hong Kong night life," Keogh said of his 18-year-old son. Then, after basic training, Belfast. "He hates the place," Keogh said. "It's different from what he was promised."

SYDNEY — Rex Manson, 20, told a judge Thursday that he grew marijuana in his apartment because smoking tobacco was a health hazard. The magistrate, however, showed Manson smoking marijuana was a wealth hazard. He fined him $420.

TerHorst Called Before the Bar

Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Former presidential press Secretary J. F. TerHorst was welcomed back to the National Press Club by hundreds of his colleagues Thursday night and given a "full, free and absolute pardon" for hiding out in the White House for a month.

Terhorst, pipe clenched in his mouth, pleaded "no contest" to the "high crime and misdemeanor" of absenting himself from the club bar for 30 days and nights.

When TerHorst, back again with The Detroit News, walked into the room, the media went to work. The light man, the sound man and the cameraman all did a number around him. One of those long shotgun microphones followed him everywhere. Another cameraman elbowed for room. And reporters queued up to ask questions.

Friends and admirers, about 300 of them, circled him and, eager to shake his hand, pressed in tightly.

TerHorst managed to say that he was "totally unaccustomed" to such attention and "uncomfortable with it." Still, he looked as though he was enjoying it thoroughly.

Four club members sang, to the tune of Hello, Dolly: "Hello, Jerry, welcome home, Jerry, though you didn't stap away so very long, you did it great, Jerry, told it straight, Jerry, though you didn't stay House sharpies tried to steer you wrong . . ."

In accepting the "pardon," TerHorst joked, "Looking back on what is still in my mind a complex and confusing maze of events . . . I know that many fair-minded people believe that my motivations and actions were intentionally self-serving. This burden is the heaviest one of all to bear, but I shall bear it to the bank . . ."

U.S. Seeks Gas Mileage Claims Standard

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission has started an effort to find a single standard test all auto companies would have to use as the basis for advertising claims of gasoline mileage.

If the agency finds that a single uniform test for fuel economy is possible, consumers buying 1976 model year cars a year from now may be able to compare competing mileage claims and relate them to their own driving experience, something the agency says is "impossible" now.

The agency said that car buyers apparently want more information about fuel economy and the number of ads making such mileage claims has increased dramatically. Three-fifths of all car ads during the first three months of this year made some sort of mileage claim, the FTC added.

But an FTC survey indicated the claims are based on such widely varying test mothods that the useful information provided the consumer "is open to serious question."

"Some tests used were conducted on interstate highways at or near the speed limit; others were on test tracks, at varying speeds; still others were simple termed 'city,' 'suburban' or 'highway' tests, without further description," the FTC said.

In addition, "test drivers ran the range from professional drivers, to employees of the manufacturers, to celebrities." Often, ads failed to disclose many other variables which affect auto fuel economy: The car's number of cylinders, type of transmission, weight; the average speed of the car tested, the number of stops per mile, the degree to which the car was warmed up, as well as the road and weather conditions, the agency said.

The auto makers generally didn't disclose sufficient information for a consumer to tell whether the claimed figures have any relevance to his own likely experience with the same car, the FTC said, and the variations of the tests made comparison of competing cars impossible.

The FTC — an independent agency charged with rooting out unfair and deceptive practices and false advertising — said the absence of a recognized standard for gas mileage may be both unfair and deceptive. So it said it was starting a rulemaking proceeding to consider whether such a standard can be developed to govern both advertising and labeling.

Thomas Rosch, director of the FTC's bureau of consumer protection, said the FTC departed from its normal procedure of publishing a specific proposed rule and asking for comments because it wants comments on "some very complex technological issues" before it starts to fashion a rule.

The issues the FTC wants addressed include:

—Can "typical driving conditions" be simulated?

—Should testing be on the road, track, or in the laboratory?

—Who whould conduct the tests?

—Should there be separate figures for city, highway, and over-all driving?

—How should the test cars be selected? Should cars with all available options be tested?

Rosch said the agency had not made a judgment on the quality of fuel tests conducted at the Environmental Protection Agency: Results of EPA tests for the 1975 cars will be out shortly.

Soviets Spawn Pepsi Elite

By PATRICK WORSNIP

NOVOROSSISK, Soviet Union (Reuter) — In the place of honor on the wall of the factory boardroom, where you might expect a picture of Lenin, is a black plastic mount containing a gilded bottle of Pepsi-Cola.

In this new, gleaming white factory on a low hill overlooking the port of Novorossisk on the Black Sea, Soviet workers turn out bottles of the soft drink under licence from the United States firm, Pepsico Inc.

When the plant opened at the end of last May, Pepsico chairman Donald Kendall wrote in the visitors' book that Pepsi was the symbol of a new era in American-Soviet relations.

But so far, instead of being consumed morning, noon and night by millions of the Pepsi generation, Soviet Pepsi, in the familiar red, white and blue labelled bottles, has joined the long list of commodities reaching only the favored few.

The 120,000-odd bottles produced daily at the Novorossisk plant are sold only in the nearby Crimean and Black Sea resorts, in Moscow and a few other fortunate cities.

Even there, they are hard to find and cost 31 kopeks (about 40 cents) each, plus nine kopeks deposit on the bottle.

Factory chairman Andrei Organov justifies the high cost by the need to recoup expenditure on importing the secret-formula Pepsi extract from the parent company and equipping the factory with American and West German machinery.

Organov adds that the bottles are seldom returned, since Russians keep them as souveniers.

The reasons why Pepsi bottles and their contents are prized items here are not hard to see, soft drinks being notoriously one of the weakest sectors of the domestic economy.

ATTRACTS RUSSIANS

Apart from milk, mineral water and kvas (a murky fluid made from black bread), there is basically only one soft drink, a yellow, chemical-tasting substance variously labelled as apple juice, lemonade, mandarin or some other fruity designation.

Compared with these products, Pepsi looks exotic, tastes interesting and, with its foreign origin and faintly narcotic content, has overtones of something a little wicked.

As though to emphasize that Pepsi-Cola is one of the harder soft drinks, the factory is attached to a brewery and its production comes under the auspices of Rosglavpivo, the Russian food ministry department responsible for beer.

Senior foreman Valentina Bobruk says in the enthusiastic tones of a TV commercial that "Pepsi is so good for you that at the end of the day it makes you feel as if the day is just beginning."

"The factory workers drink Pepsi-Cola, and they don't feel tired."

Four times a year, 250 11-gallon containers of extract arrive in trucks from England. The extract is mixed with twice-refined sugar and the high-purity Novorossisk water before being bottled.

STAFF ALL RUSSIAN

The bottles, labels—with the word Pepsi-Cola transliterated into Russian characters—bottle-tops and plastic shipping cases are Soviet-made.

The factory employs only 56 people, all of them Russians, now that the American and West German experts and machine-fitters have left. With just one shift a day, the equipment is under-utilized at present but two shifts will be started later, Organov said.

The humblest workers—girls in white coats and caps trimmed with red and white polka-dots—earn a basic rate of 83 roubles ($110) a month.

Under the terms of a 10-year contract signed in Moscow by Kendall in April, 1973, expansion of Pepsi production here will depend on Pepsico's success in selling Russian vodka and wines in the United States.

The Soviet Union is the 121st country to taste Pepsi-Cola. But why Pepsi and not the firms great rival, Coca-Cola?

"Its all a matter of taste," said Mrs. Bobruk.

BOOK BUS TO VISIT

A bus displaying 2,000 books written and published by Canadians will be in Victoria next Thursday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the public library.

The visit, part of a western tour, is sponsored by the Independent Publishers Association and the Canada Council. The IPA is an organization of 80 publishing firms seeking to promote interest in Canadian literature.

CAVEAT EMPTOR:

Take Facts To Market

By LYNNE GORDON

This weekly column on consumerism will be dedicated to helping you help yourself. And believe me, you CAN, if you are given the facts on what's happening in the marketplace today.

I am sick and tired of unscrupulous operators or overzealous salesmen saying that: "If consumers weren't so greedy, or if they didn't have a little bit of larceny in their souls, they couldn't be taken."

Even if that were always the case — and it isn't — what right does that give someone to exploit another human being? After all, the con man has the cards stacked in his favor. He's playing on the ignorance of the consumer and he's completely prepared with a memorized pitch, the facts and the perfect time to approach the customer. An informed consumer is more likely to keep from falling for a swindle, a shady deal, or even misleading advertising.

That is why I intend to zero in on the techniques and business patterns used, rather than the names of specific operators and companies.

Mr. X may go out of business or change his name, then, Mr. Y steps up to take his place — using exactly the same selling techniques.

If you become familiar with the language, you'll be able to spot the phony pitch, or the clever come on. You should learn some of the new consumer words used by a swindler to describe the consumer or the victim, such as The Mark (easy), The Mooch, The Tip.

You'll read about "bait 'n switch", a technique used to lure you into a store, or to get a salesman into your home with promises of unbelievable bargains that never materialize. The "switch" comes when the salesman says he's out of stock on the advertised item, or out of the color you want, and "steps you up" to a more expensive purchase. In the trade they say "the merchandise is nailed to the floor."

Some of my columns will warn you about the free gift racket, the come on that leaves you with a freezer, a stereo or even a holiday package that you never really wanted or could afford — all at a highly inflated price.

Other columns will describe the door-to-door salesman or itinerant seller that sweeps through a neighborhood in an old, usually unmarked truck, taking your money and leaving behind a trail of unfinished driveways, roofs that leak and aluminum siding that was poorly installed. When you go to find the guy, he may have disappeared or gone bankrupt.

In later columns, I'll cover all consumer-oriented subjects from carpet buying to computer dating; from food buying to financial investments; from rip-off repairs to runaway inflation.

I strongly believe that consumerism deals with any area where you are being asked to spend your money or invest your emotions. Each topic will be extensively researched but condensed to give you the facts in the most forceful way.

In my work as a consumer reporter on radio and television, I've interviewed professionals, industry spokesmen, experts, government officials and consumers to get my story and I've had some very unusual and frightening experiences. All this should help you before you make any transaction that can be damaging.

But if you are already involved in a bad deal, speak out. Complain. That's your right. Complaining does not make you a rabble rouser, a crank or a kook. Those are terms used by some salesmen to shut you up. When you have paid money for a product or service, you have a right to expect satisfaction.

If you don't get it, don't be embarrassed or intimidated into suffering in silence. The reputable business wants your continued business, he wants to know if something is wrong.

But above all, complain effectively. First, go back to the original dealer or salesperson and give him a chance to help. If he fails to respond, go up the ladder to the manager or president.

It's best to write a letter stating the facts and the problem clearly, without sarcasm, where you purchased the article, the date of the purchase and the serial or model number if there is one. Keep all your receipts, a copy of your letter and all replies.

If all fails, persist and go to the consumer protection bureau in your area. If they can't help, they will direct you to the proper agency.

Be fair, be firm, be heard . . . And be ready for the next column in this series.

Marriage Views Jeered

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION

CALGARY (CP) — Attorney-general Merv Leitch was booed and hissed by more than 300 women when he said a marriage is "significantly different than an economic partnership."

Leitch was speaking to women from both rural and urban areas attending a two day conference on women and the law.

His statement came at the end of the one-day session during which the women spent considerable time discussing a women's property rights and the changes in property law proposed by the Alberta Institute of Law Research and Reform.

Elizabeth Pedersen, a member of the federal advisory council on the status of women and president of the women of Unifarm, spokes for many others at the conference earlier in the day when she said "marriage is an economic partnership as well as a social and sexual union."

Leitch's remarks received a less than warm welcome from delegates who were expecting a forecast concerning legislation protecting women's rights that the Conservative government might enact in coming months.

Instead, Leitch explained how changes in existing legislation can be made and avoided many questions from the women seeking information about what specific changes in law he would like to see.

Following Leitch's address, conference chairman Maria Erikson said she was angry "because I don't think he is taking us seriously."

"I get the feeling we're being pushed into the position of being militant, to go out and do things like burn our bras or march. Why can't we have some dialogue on a rational basis and get things done that way?"

Although Leitch admitted many of the province's laws dealing with families, including matrimonial property, are out of date he did not outline how specific laws might be changed.

"Discrimination is a feeling, a state of mind" he said and can not be legislated out of existence.

Joni Chorny, president of the Calgary Local Council of Women, said she was disturbed and disappointed to hear a member of government so condescending to a group of intelligent women.

Meanwhile in Vancouver, some 350 women have formed a new provincial organization — the British Columbia Federation of Women (BCFW).

Twelve resolutions, many aimed at the provincial government's inaction on women's rights, were drawn up by the organization.

The group was organized as an umbrella association of women's groups. Representatives from an estimated 30 womens' groups attended.

Kate Swann, named co-ordinator of the group, said the BCFW would seek individual members, who do not necessarily belong to other women's groups.

In its two-day convention at the University of B.C., the BCFW called on the provincial government to implement MLA Rosemary Brown's private member's bill entitled the Affirmative Action Plan Act. The act requires government offices and contractors to work toward full equality in employment practices.

The BCFW also called for high-quality, 24-hour child care.

Other resolutions asked the government to give more money to the Human Rights Commission

Dallimores Mark 60th

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Dallimore, who were married September 18, 1914 in Victoria, will be honored with an open house Sunday, Sept. 22 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Doug Griffith, 2245 Brighton Avenue, Oak Bay.

"AGE DON'T MEAN NOTHING," says 104-year-old Roy Rawlins, left, pictured with John Burrafato, a driving examiner for the California Department of Motor Vehicles, after the oldster was recently granted a full four-year driver's licence with no restrictions — not even that he wear eyeglasses.

FACELIFT PAIN 'NOT WORTH IT'

TORONTO (CP) — Getting tired of seeing those wrinkles all over your face? Maybe you think a facelift will do wonders for you and make you a lot happier.

Forget it, advises Irene Gibson of Thornhill, Ont., mother of three and grandmother of five, who had one more than a year ago.

"I'm against a facelift," said the 53-year-old model who doesn't look her years.

"It's something to think about very carefully."

"You can be embarrassed by looking too young — say 39 when you're 53 — and you still go around with your own age group.

"If I had known what I had to go through, I wouldn't have had it done. I won't have any further repair work done on my face. What's a little wrinkle here or there?"

Irene entered hospital April 27 last year and had her facelift the next day. Today she is still suffering side-effects from the operation.

"My ears feel as if they are sewn to my head, and I feel like I have a tight strip under my chin all the time.

"If it is damp or going to rain, it tightens right up and feels worse, not painful but a sensation that bothers me."

Irene said she has to wear her hair the same way all the time because of bad scars just above the ears.

"The scars can be closed up but I won't have it done. It would be like having a facelift."

Irene had thought about having a facelift for five months.

"I had pouches on each side of my chin, a scrawny wrinkled neck and a tired look that made my face look pulled down."

It involved a four-hour operation and five days in hospital.

Childproof Lids Made Law For Prescriptions

Most prescription drugs sold in B.C. must be in child-resistant containers by the beginning of next year, according to a bylaw of the province's new Pharmacy Act, proclaimed by cabinet this week.

Packages must meet Canadian Standards Association guidelines for child resistance — usually bottles with hard-to-remove caps — by Jan. 1, 1975.

The act, which comes into effect this Monday, September 23, lists four conditions under which child-proof bottles need not be used: if the doctor writing the prescription asks that they not be; if the pharmacists thinks an individual case does not warrant their use; if they are not available, or if the form of the drug makes it difficult to use the bottles.

The act will allow co-ops and societies to operate their own pharmacies for the first time.

Previous legislation allowed only licensed pharmacists or corporations with the majority of directors licensed pharmacists to own pharmacies or dispense drugs.

The new act allows societies and co-operatives to operate pharmacies if they are run under the "bone fide management of a pharmacist."

Stricter safeguards for the preparation, handling and distribution of drugs are included in the act and doctors will no longer be able to directly or indirectly own a pharmacy.

The Pharmaceutical Association of B.C. will become the College of Pharmacists of B.C. under the act and will form a discipline committee to investigate and conduct hearings into the conduct of college members.

Cabinet also proclaimed bylaws for the new College of Pharmacists.

Acupuncture Put Down At Seminar

VANCOUVER (CP) — A pharmacology professor at the University of British Columbia said that selection of patients with high pain thresholds, heavy sedation and gullibility of the public account for the apparent success of acupuncture.

David Quastel made the statements in a question period following an address by Dr. L. C. Jenkins, head of the Vancouver General Hospital's acupuncture committee, during a seminar on acupuncture.

Jenkins was one of 10 Canadian doctors who travelled to China last spring to observe acupuncture.

Quastel said careful selection of patients and the use of pain-killers and sedatives made acupuncture appear effective.

Jenkins replied that sedative dosages were too low to account for the results and said that for certain operations, notably thyroidectomies, there is little selection as acupuncture is used in 90 per cent of the cases.

When Quastel said he didn't think a thyroidectomy, an operation to remove part of the thyroid gland from the throat, would be painful, Jenkins replied: "You wouldn't say that if you'd had your throat cut from ear to ear."

Quastel said the use of acupuncture and traditional medicine in China is a political ploy to get the co-operation of the people.

"Every authoritarian regime has had its mysticism . . . to distract the people from the real problems," he said.

Yogurt Gets Closer Look

By MICHAEL MALIK

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Twenty-four Kenyan Masai tribesmen, eating and drinking as much as they can hold, have given scientists a pointer as to how to reduce the level of cholesterol in the blood, with important implications for research into heart disease.

Western man who over-eats food rich in cholesterol suffers from hardening of the arteries — atherosclerosis — and degenerative heart diseases to such an extent it is almost an epidemic in North America.

But the Masai, who live on a cholesterol-rich diet of milk and meat have been known for years to be almost free of heart disease.

Most experts believed this was because of the enormous amount of exercise these nomadic cattlemen take, with young Masai covering anything up to 25 miles a day.

But through a total accident a team of medical researchers, looking for something completely different, believe they have stumbled over the secret of the Masai's arteries — yogurt.

PROVIDE LINK

For years health faddists have advocated yogurt for a long and active life, but no scientific reason has ever been advanced for this. Now the Masai have provided a link between cholesterol and yogurt which may provide a key to a real heart disease breakthrough.

The research has been carried out by Dr. George Mann of Vanderbilt University in Tennessee and Dr. Anne Spoerry, of the Kenyan flying doctor service and the African Medical Research Foundation.

Dr. Man came to East Africa a year ago looking for a group of people living in a completely natural background and unpolluted with modern food additives.

His purpose was research into the effect of surfactants — the substances which makes it easier to mix oil and water and which is added to many foods such as mayonnaise, chololate, ice cream and cakes and is contained in detergents.

Research with animals had suggested that surfactants added to diet increased blood cholesterol levels, so Dr. Mann wanted a group of people for research who had none in their diet.

With the help of the Kenyan flying doctor team he persuaded 24 young Masai men to take part in the experiment in return for all the meat and milk they could eat plus one cow each at the end.

HAD CONTROL GROUP

The young men were divided into two groups, one of which had surfactants added in small quantities to their diet of meat and fermented whole milk — the sort of home-made yogurt which the Masai prefer to fresh milk.

Unfortunately for Drs. Mann and Spoerry, however, things did not go quite right. First of all the young men started to put on weight, which itself upsets the blood cholesterol level and threatened to invalidate the experimental data.

Secondly, the Masai became extremely anxious to get back home.

It was therefore decided to end the experiment after only three weeks on what looked like an unsuccessful note.

Dr. Mann returned to the United States and had the results analysed.

That was when the surprise came, for the results showed that the men in both groups had lowep cholesterol levels in their blood than when the experiment started.

Since they had been eating about twice as much as they usually do and were taking less exercise during the experiment, there appeared to be only one logical explanation: the more yogurt you eat the lower your cholesterol level.

The Masai were consuming up to eight litres (1.7 gallons) of yogurt a day during the experimental period and by all the rules their cholesterol level should have gone up.

FOUND MINIMUM

Dr. Mann has since conducted experiments on Americans and has found that if a minimum of 3½ pints of yogurt a day is consumed, it appears to have a definite and consistent effect on cholesterol levels.

Now research is in progress to discover why this is and to isolate whatever it is in yogurt that has the beneficial effect.

Dr. Mann believes it may be that the bacteria which ferments the milk and turns it into yogurt may produce a substance — probably a fatty acid — which stops the body's own production of cholesterol in the liver.

The full facts have yet to be established but it does appear that the hearty appetites of 24 Masai men may have started something which will benefit the whole of mankind.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By Dr. Walter Alvarez

During the winter months, when many northerners escape from the cold and rain to Mexico or the Caribbean for a week or two, they sometimes make themselves very uncomfortable by getting a bad sunburn.

Such unhappy people will be interested in a discovery by Diane Snyder, Ph.D. and William Eaglestein, M.D., of the University of Miami, that a sunburned person can get relief by taking aspirin (by injection) and applying indomethacin to the burned skin. The doctors found that within a few hours, the patients' redness and pain disappeared. They reported their findings in the Jan. 28, 1974 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

IMPROVING HEARING

Some hard-of-hearing people can get relief with 10 acupuncture treatments, according to Dr. Greg Koss, director of the Acupuncture Centre of America (1750 D Street, N.W., Washington, D.C.). This treatment may even help people with nerve deafness. Dr. Koss says that there is now an acupuncture clinic where medical doctors who are experienced in the field of acupuncture will specialize in treating people with hearing disorders.

Acupuncture can also help relieve arthritis, muscle spasm, inflammation of muscles and nerves, fibrositis (like a mild arthritis), bursitis (often in a shoulder), sciatica (pain down the back of the thigh), tinnitus (ear noise), migraine (sick headaches), some skin disorders, sinus trouble, and tennis elbow.

Dr. Koss says that patients with hearing trouble are examined and tested carefully to determine whether or not they should be accepted for acupuncture treatment.

NECK ARTERIES

For years physicians have known that some strokes are due to a plugging up of one of the important two arteries (the carotid arteries) that supply blood to the brain.

Now, in a release from the American Heart Association, I read that disease in a neck artery which causes it to plug up can be recognized by bouncing high-frequency sound off of the artery and recording the echoes, in order to understand something about the nature of the reflecting surface.

In medicine, such remarkable new technics are constantly being devised. The apparatus for bouncing the high-frequency sound off tissues of the body being used by Drs. J. H. Reid and P. S. Paulson of Seattle is called a directional doppler flow-meter.

DISTRESSING NAMES

I will never forget my distress when in my youth I met a girl with a name that had an unpleasant sexual connotation. Even then I knew that the poor girl must have suffered terribly from the amusement, contempt, or disgust that her name caused.

Particularly sad is the tendency of some parents who wanted a son and got a daughter instead, to give her a boy's name. For instance, in "The Well of Loneliness," one of the first books to deal honestly and sympathetically with lesbianism, the heroine had been named Stephen by her father.

A number of my patients have told me of their troubles with odd or inappropriate names. Always, in these cases, I wonder why the person does not have his name changed legally.

I could give here a number of examples of this sort of thing, but I don't want to give anyone more pain than he or she already has suffered. I only want to suggest to people with an embarrassing surname that they get their name changed; and I hope that when people are naming a child, they will remember that it is unkind to burden the child with an odd name or one that could belong either to a boy or a girl.

dear abby

Explanation Is Due

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday the man across the street came up to me while I was outside and said, "Where is your old man?"

I said, "If you mean my husband, he is at work. Why do you want to know?"

Then he said "Because your husband has been calling up my old lady and trying to get her to go out with him."

I didn't know what to say next, so I said, "Well, he'll be home in about an hour. Why don't you come back and talk to him?" Then I went in the house and cried.

When my husband came home, I told him what happened. He said it was all a big lie, but he looked nervous and took off right away saying he'd be right back. He called me up later to say he wouldn't be home for supper.

Meanwhile, the man from across the street came over again, asking for my husband. He said my husband had called up his wife again and asked her to say she must have been mistaken — that the guy who was trying to get her to go out with him was somebody else.

I don't know who to believe, Abby. If my husband had stayed home and faced his neighbor like a man, I would have had more faith in him. What do you think? — Hurt

DEAR HURT: I think your husband has a lot of explaining to do.

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a lovely woman. She has two daughters, 15 and 17. They are fine girls, but they go around the house half-nude. They stand around in the kitchen in their shorty nightgowns with nothing on underneath, and often run through the house with nothing on top and very little below.

I asked the girls to please keep themselves covered, for the sake of modesty, and they looked at me like I was out of my mind.

My wife says there is nothing shameful about the body. I am now wondering if maybe I am wrong.

I can't help thinking that those young ladies should change their ways instead of me changing my ideas. — Old Goat

DEAR GOAT: You're not wrong. They are.

DEAR ABBY: That letter signed "stuck with the kids" could have been written by me. Fresh out of college, I got a dream job. Then marriage, and boom! Two kids, one right after the other. (Both accidents.) I resented them terribly for robbing me of my freedom. Then I felt guilty because I couldn't "love" them like a mother should.

I never hurt my kids physically, but emotionally I was destroying them and myself.

I tried alcohol, drugs, even suicide. I wrote to you as a last resort, and your answer sunk in. I lucked out with a terrific psychiatrist.

I'm glad you told "stuck" that a seemingly overwhelming situation can be dealt with and to get professional help — but fast! I pray that she does. It was my salvation. Thank you, Abby. — Blessed

Bread Basket Theory Doesn't Hold Water

HALIFAX (CP) — The adage that the world's oceans will be the natural "bread basket" of the future no longer holds true, with most fish under international quota and as men begin to consider stocks of fish as finite.

This is the situation which, according to Dr. E. Graham Bligh, director of the fisheries and marine service laboratory here, can be met with developments in aquaculture and by greater husbandry in processing traditional and under-utilized marketable species.

Recently appointed to the presidency of the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology (CIFST), Bligh said in an interview that Canadians, who "usually consider food as a low priority item," now are concerned with nutrition, quality and supply of food as a big issue.

"Proportionally, Canadians still spend less of their disposable income on food than do other consumers. In Italy and Japan food takes up 30 per cent of income; in Russia the figure may be as high as 50 per cent.

"However," he said, "per capita consumption of meat is declining; the world shortage of fish is critical; agricultural land is being urbanized, and food inventories around the world are below normal."

As the president of the CIFST, Bligh sees that organization's role as developing a Canadian food policy to ensure protection and utilization of food resources and production capacity.

In his role as director of a fisheries laboratory, he has the opportunity to work toward implementation of these goals, supervising experiments in applied food science.

Among his concerns are maximum extraction of protein from each fish through initiation of new products and the commercial development of new species as traditional species decline or become commercially extinct.

Bligh said filleting of fish is a wasteful operation, taking only the choice flesh and discarding 60 to 70 per cent of the fish.

"Fillets will survive as a choice product but we will no longer be able to discard the backs without salvaging the protein."

New products using maximum protein are being created by the Halifax laboratory's meat-bone separator which squeezes fish under a high pressure perforated roller.

Consistency of the product can be varied from that of hamburger to paste, depending on the size of the interchangeable rollers.

Bligh said products like the minced fish burger lend themselves to continuous processing, quality control and automation as convenience foods.

"Convenience foods are extremely important in the institutional trade at a time when most Canadians eat one meal away from home each day."

Aquaculture, or raising fish in a controlled environment, is a venture with potential in the Atlantic region, he said.

"In the Atlantic lobster, we have a product with a good image and high value which, unlike the migratory salmon, is a resident species and thereby lends itself to aquaculture."

In such an aquatic farm, where disease is easily communicated, contamination would be a major factor, though, he added.

"We have been active here in drafting a disease control and prevention program related to fish farming and ensuring that new diseases aren't brought to Canadian waters."

Other programs, in cooperation with the fishing industry, have studied the use of freeze-drying, vacuum pouches, and immediate freezing of the product at sea.

As protein costs and prices continue to rise, fish probably will become more expensive than grains and assume a gourmet character rather than the traditional role of poor man's food, he said.

With demand exceeding supply in the food industry, fish will certainly increase its current one-per-cent share in the world's biggest business, the scientist concluded.

Women's Domain Expanding In Sure Fashion

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Woman's place is in the home — if she so chooses. But to a great many women today, and to men as well, home as woman's sole domain no longer is acceptable.

Not all is utopia, not yet. Win some campaigns, lose some.

That's the way it is today, says a review of women's roles as changed in recent years by society, liberation, and law.

"To build confidence and solidarity, women are organizing their own law firms, sports associations, health centres, schools, political caucuses, union groups art museums, bookstores, rape crisis units, banks and businesses," said the review.

The review, titled "Woman's Changing Place: A Look at Sexism," is published by the Public Affairs Committee, Inc., a non-profit educational organization headquartered in New York.

The author is Nancy Doyle, who specializes in writing of health matters.

She said that surveys and polls now show a majority of women (and men) at all economic levels now "support efforts to improve the status of women.

"Women who want to be senators or heads of corporations should have access to these positions if they have the capability and determination. Not all women want to be executives. The point is that they should be free to choose what they want instead of doing what they think they must."

The review said that "for a variety of reasons, corporations and federally funded programs are hospitable to women". There is, for one, the 1972 Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) to fight sexist and racist discrimination.

"So the barriers to better jobs, even top executive positions, are beginning to crumble a bit."

Still, a full quarter of all women employed are "clustered into five jobs: Waitress, secretary, bookkeeper, elementary teacher, household worker." It's been estimated that the woman not employed outside the home spends 99.6 hours a week at 12 different jobs.

There are many areas needing direction if equality is to be a basic fact of American life.

Doyle mentioned sex stereotyping in the upbringing and education of children. Women are given a "fear of success," she said.

U.S. Poor Tell Government What's Wrong

WASHINGTON (CP) — They talked of people forced to eat dog food, of Indian children who had no shoes, of how blacks are rapidly losing the economic gains of the last decade.

They are the leaders of the poor and the ailing in the United States, called Thursday to tell President Ford how they are affected in a time of economic distress, and how they think government can do something about it.

On the first day of a two-day meeting, prelude to a summit conference Sept. 27-28 which will discuss ways of beating inflation, the 180 delegates told the president the sick and the poor are bearing too great a share of the burden of rising costs. They asked him to increase his social welfare budget, while cutting costs in other areas of government spending, especially defence.

"Tight money, restrictive credit and budget cuts have produced the current recession and the high and rising rate of unemployment," said the AFLCIO's Bert Seidman.

GIVES EXAMPLES

Leaders of about 60 major national organizations gave examples of how inflation already has hurt Americans: Slum families moving three times a year to avoid eviction and changing their names to get gas and electricity, children starving on Indian reservations; and old people eating cat and dog food and putting off medical care.

They warned that cutting welfare spending would aggravate crime, health, unemployment, and other social problems for years and perhaps even decades to come.

Edmonia Davidson of the National Council of Negro Women said inflation has set back by 25 years "whatever slow strides black families have made."

"Indians are dying of malnutrition," because prices for rice, beans and flour have doubled in the last year, said Mel Tonasket, president of the Congress of American Indians.

Delegates suggested tax revision to plug loopholes benefitting millionaires, investors, the oil industry and big corporations.

"Tax reform is an absolute must," said Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers.

JOBS NEEDED

Delegates from large cities said unemployment now exceeds 20 per cent in some urban neighborhoods and more public service employment should be created.

In the health care field, where inflation has been increasing nearly 50 per cent faster than in the general economy, delegates demanded some kind of direct federal intervention.

'Pocket of Gas' Blamed for Deaths

EDMONTON (CP) — Two city workmen were killed Thursday as they entered a sewer in West Edmonton to make a routine check.

City officials said that one of the men entered the sewer and then failed to respond to a regulation safety signal. The other workman then entered the sewer and blacked out.

A third member of the crew called for help and a fire department pump and emergency truck went to the scene.

Firefighters removed the two men from the sewer but were not able to revive them.

Howie Round, a supervisor with the department, speculated that a pocket of gas could have passed through the sewer, killing the men. But he added the exact cause may never be known.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Liberal leader Izzy Asper today urged the Manitoba government to release immediately the report of the inquiry commission into the $120 million Churchill Forest Industries project.

Asper said any further delay in releasing the report on the northern Manitoba forestry project and its financing would be construed as a cover-up by the NDP caucus.

He said Premier Ed Schreyer's comment that premature release of the report could jeopardize criminal proceedings against some of the principals in the CFI affair was "not good enough."

"The premier has had nearly four years to complete criminal prosecutions. Yet not a single step has been taken to arrest, extradite or bring to trial any of the individuals involved in the matter."

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Milk Control Board today announced the retail price of a quart of homogenized milk will increase Oct. 1 to 44 cents a quart from 37 cents.

After Oct. 1, the price will rise by one cent a month until Feb. 1, 1975. Home delivered homogenized milk will continue to cost two cents a quart more than the store price.

WINNIPEG (CP) — A book sympathetic to Steven Truscott, the Ontario boy convicted of murder when he was 14, is being withdrawn from the list of books approved for use by Manitoba English classes.

The attorney-general's office has told the provincial education department that the book, The Steven Truscott Story, as told to Bill Trent, does not "square with court records," Winston Layne, a senior English consultant with the Manitoba Department of Education, said Wednesday.

He said the book is clearly "not a factual account of what happened."

Teachers who used the book were urged to bring into the classroom a lawyer or policeman to balance the picture, he said.

But some teachers did not, and the education department received complaints from parents as a result.

CALGARY (CP) — The children of a Roman Catholic couple who charged they were discriminated against by the public school board were to start school today, public board chairman Harald Gunderson said Thursday.

The couple, Almand and Anniliese Schmidt, were told the only way they could send their children to a public school was either to renounce their church or pay $436 in fees.

The Alberta Human Rights Commission found the ruling discriminatory.

BRIDGE ENDS 40-YEAR JOB

FORT VERMILION, Alta. (CP) — Archie Mercredi rode the little ferry boat across the mighty Peace River for the last time Thursday as a $6-million bridge was opened to end this far northwestern community's dependence on the ferry as a link with the rest of the province.

The 63-year-old Mercredi, who has piloted the ferry for the last 40 years, was misty-eyed as he bade a final farewell to the old boat which had been a way of life for him and the 1,000 area residents of Alberta's second-oldest settlement.

The 1,745-foot bridge will mean the end of the ferry and also the end to cars and trucks being forced to cross the treacherous ice bridge in winter when the Peace freezes.

"It'll sure be different," said Mercredi. "I'll miss the ferry . . . but the bridge will sure be a help for the people here."

Long-time residents said they doubted if the bridge would ever be constructed and Lt.-Gov. Ralph Steinhauer of Alberta said the bridge marks the fulfillment of many dreams.

"The mighty Peace brought explorers, fur traders, missionaries and settlers," said Steinhauer. "They had dreams of the future. The natives who were here also had dreams.

"And now, it's a dream come true for those who had those dreams. The opening of this bridge fulfils their dreams."

Gov't Posts To Women

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced Thursday the appointments of a deputy government whip and three new parliamentary secretaries.

Two women and a former Saskatchewan minister of education and municipal affairs were named parliamentary secretaries. In addition, 17 former parliamentary secretaries were appointed to one-year terms to give them the opportunity to serve a total of two years.

Coline Campbell, (South Western Nova), a 33-year-old legal aid lawyer, was appointed parliamentary secretary to the minister of health and welfare. With her election July 8, she became the first woman from Nova Scotia to sit in the House of Commons.

Another new MP, Iona Campagnolo (Skeena), was named parliamentary secretary to the minister of Indian affairs and northern development. Campagnolo, 42, was advertising director for a Prince Rupert, B.C., radio station before her election.

McIsaac, 41, a veterinarian, served as a cabinet minister in the former Liberal administration in Saskatchewan.

French at Top Sought in Gov't

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federal Public Service Commission stepped up its efforts to increase the number of French-speaking Canadians in senior management levels in 1973, with Francophones representing 38 per cent of appointments to the executive category from outside the government.

The annual report of the commission for 1973, released Thursday, also shows that 18.3 per cent of executive-category employees were French-speaking, compared with 16.5 per cent in 1972.

The increased representation for French-Canadians in the senior levels follows a promise by commission chairman John Carson in 1972 to make the representation of Francophones, women and native people more nearly in balance with their proportion in the population at large.

While 38 per cent of new appointments were French-speaking, only about 15 per cent of appointments to the executive category within the public service were Francophones.

Although the total number of women appointed to the senior management levels in the public service was small, the number in the executive category tripled to nine from three.

Another 10 women were among 503 appointees to senior management levels in the administrative and foreign service, and scientific and professional categories.

The report says that in 1973 all recommendations pertaining to the public service commission in the Royal commission on the status of women were met.

The recommendations urged the commission to end sex-typing in publications, to introduce programs to allow women to train for senior positions and to begin programs to end the imbalances in the proportion of men and women at senior levels of the public service.

Housing Shortage 'Can Only Improve'

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadians have seen the worst of the country's housing shortage, the president-elect of the Canadian Real Estate Association says.

"The situation can only improve from this point," Georges Couillard of Quebec City said in an interview Thursday. "There is a definite crisis."

He noted that the current national vacancy rate is 2¼ per cent. However, Ottawa was "admitting they need to study the situation, and this is a favorable indication."

Couillard, attending the annual convention of the association, said that until recently, there has "definitely" been a lack of understanding at federal policy-making levels about the housing market.

Couillard said the association, to which 87 per cent of the country's real estate firms belong, "has to exchange thoughts more and more" with those responsible for deciding policies.

He also said he believes "everyone has the right to own their own homes. This is not a luxury, it is a basic right."

He attributed one of the reasons for the current crunch in housing to a "bulge in the population" as "war babies" marry and begin to raise children.

"We expect this jump in the rate of new family formations will go on for another five years."

But a major obstacle to building reasonably-priced homes was a lack of serviced land.

"Municipalities just don't have the money."

He said the federal government should seek ways to increase the flow of investment into real estate construction.

One way would be to "eliminate or reduce" some taxes on building and real-estate transactions. Another would be stricter monitoring of land use, he said.

The Allotment Garden: Another Show Tomorrow

A bouquet of carrots, beets, onions and turnips tastefully arranged with leaves of spinach and swiss chard should go to each plotholder who took part in the display of produce last week at the V.H.S. fall show.

People who had been unaware of the project in spite of publicity all summer, were given the chance to see what has been accomplished.

Your display of produce tomorrow at the Gordon Head Garden Club show will no doubt reflect the experience gained.

The general public and all interested visitors are reminded the 20th Annual fall Show of the Gordon Head garden Club is being held at the Recreation Centre on Lambrick Way, 1744 Feltham Road, in Gordon Head.

Warm days in September are a real blessing for gardeners. Vegetables and flowers we thought would never amount to much are entering a period of splendid maturity.

Cucumbers, sweet peppers and tomatoes — the semi tropical things that were so slow growing earlier, are now producing. Tomatoes are ripening all over the plots.

This weekend, decide not to tempt young Jack Frost some early morning. Don't leave the ripening tomatoes on your plants unless you are a daily visitor to your plot. The ones which have commenced ripening can be further colored at home in room temperature. Don't put them in the refrigerator until they are red.

★ ★ ★

A great deal of flavor will be sacrificed by gathering these fruits before fully ripe, but its better to take home 10 or 15 pounds of partially ripe ones than to lose them all to the first dawn frost.

Look over your other vegetables too. Young squash fruits are susceptible to frost; more mature ones protected by large leaves are likely to be unharmed by light frost although leaves are blackened.

Pumpkins of full size continue ripening in cool weather and are not harmed by early frost. They usually stay on the plants until Thanksgiving and Halloween unless heavy rains previously make it urgent to take them in to prevent rotting on the undersides of the fruits. A piece of wood beneath each fruit helps prevent this.

The list of vegetables to be left in the ground until late fall and early winter has been in this column previously. It is the more tender ones which must really be taken soon for use in the next few weeks.

This weekend take plastic bags to carry peas, beans, tomatoes. No hurry about root vegetables yet. They will be safe enough until a weather change.

This will be the last Friday column devoted exclusively to allotment gardens for this season. Routine work for winter months with vegetables will appear in the regular daily columns.

The Gordon Head flower and vegetable show is open tomorrow, September 21 from 2 to 9 p.m. Drive out Shelbourne Street towards Mount Douglas Park, and look for Feltham Road on the right.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is the relatively rare day when a defender makes a blind opening lead of an ace from an A-Q combination. Thus, when such a lead is made, declarer simply refuses to believe it; and his disbelief leads him to adopt a losing line of play.

The latter was the case in today's deal, which came up in the 1974 Masters Knockout Team-of-Four Championships. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

Both sides vulnerable.
South deals.

NORTH
♠ K 10 9 3
♥ K J 7 4
♦ 6 3
♣ K 10 5

WEST
♠ A Q 4
♥ A 10 9 5 3
♦ 9 7 5
♣ 7 2

EAST
♠ 7 6
♥ 8
♦ J 10 8 4 2
♣ Q 8 6 4 3

SOUTH
♠ J 8 5 2
♥ Q 6 2
♦ A K Q
♣ A J 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

North's two-club response was the initiation of the Stayman Convention. When South showed his four-card spade suit, North carried on to game in this suit.

After West's ace of spades had won the opening lead, West shifted to the ace of hearts. To trick three, he led a low heart, which East ruffed. East returned a diamond, which was taken by South's ace.

When South next led the eight of trumps, and West followed suit with the four-spot, South took quite a while to think over the situation. The question that he had to determine was whether West's ace of spades opening lead had been from the tripleton A-Q-4 or from the doubleton A-4.

He finally decided that the lead had been from the doubleton A-4; and, hence, that East at this point had the singleton queen remaining (East had followed to the original trump lead, and had ruffed the second lead of hearts). So declarer put up the board's king of trumps — as East discarded a club. West's queen of trumps had just become the setting trick.

From West's point of view, his opening lead of the ace of trumps had everything to gain and nothing to lose. If, for example, the dummy had put down four little trumps, then West would shift to some other suit, since his guarded queen of trumps (behind declarer's presumed king) would always produce another trump trick for him.

Had West not led a trump originally, declarer, in attacking the trump suit, probably would have led the jack of spades and finessed against West's hoped-for queen. He would then have fulfilled his contract.

Now to Business —50 Years Late

BELLINGHAM (AP) — What began as a round of formal parties nearly 50 years ago blossomed again Thursday with the gathering of legislators and government officials from British Columbia and Washington State.

Titled a "Symposium on Canadian-American Relations," the three-day conference is attracting several hundred delegates discussing a wide variety of problems plagueing the region.

It marks only the second time members of the two legislatures have met. Washington's lawmakers were honored at a round of parties and dinners in Victoria in 1925, but the symposium is the first working session.

The convention opened on a sombre note, with Rep. H. A. Goltz (Dem.—Bellingham) reminding delegates that just the day before the American government had released five British Columbia fishing vessels which seized for fishing in U.S. waters.

He also cited the need to discuss a controversial plan by Seattle City Light to raise Ross Dam, which would flood part of B.C.'s Skagit valley, and problems associated with Point Roberts, Wash., accessible by land only through B.C.

Thursday's sessions, held at Western Washington State College, were designed to acquaint the participants with basic facts about the state and province. A number of small group discussions on specific, sometimes controversial issues were planned today.

Premier Barrett and Gov. Dan Evans are to address the gathering Saturday.

The main difference between B.C. and Washington, said conference director Gerard Ruttan, is that Washingtonians have a populist mentality.

"The real difference in the governments is not structure but in the people's voice," he said. "Washington residents say, 'the legislature is very nice, but we'll reserve the final say to ourselves'."

He cited the heavy use of initiatives and referenda by state residents in their role as "the third and final house of the legislature."

Another key difference is that Washington residents have much more distrust of state government and like to do as much for themselves as they can, said Ruttan, a professor at the college.

Dr. Walter Young of the University of Victoria explained the province's constitutional monarchy.

Legislators discussed the possibility of passing parallel legislation in both the province and state to set up a common attack on a mutual problem.

Since neither has the constitutional right to enter into treaties with a foreign nation or or region, the legislatures must be cautious in taking such an approach, said Dr. P. Roff Johansson of Johns Hopkins University.

Americans generally are ignorant of Canadian government policies, Ruttan said, whereas school children in Ottawa tend to know as much about U.S. politics as they know about their own government.

"Canada is our neighbor, our largest trading partner and our most strongly-linked ally," he added.

NEW HEAD of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities is Kathleen Grouhel, mayor of Ladysmith. She is the first woman to head the association and has been chief magistrate of the mid-Island community for the past 10 years.

CURRY ON ROSTER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran centre Bill Curry, president of the National Football League Players Association, has been placed on the active roster by Los Angeles Rams. He had been plagued by a knee injury

CATCHER SUFFERING
NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees catcher Thurman Munson says he has played more than half of the 1974 baseball season while suffering from painful tendonitis in his throwing arm. Yankee manager Bill Virdon said Munson's handling of pitchers and his overall value to the team has kept the ailing catcher in the starting lineup.

Movies

Daisy Kenyon (xx), on 12 at 1.30. A love triangle situation in which a woman must choose between her lover and her husband. Real heavies in the cast include Joan Crawford, Dana Andrews and Henry Fonda.

Our Little Girl, on 11 at 2. Shirley Temple holds the spotlight in this story about a marriage going on the rocks. Joel McCrea and Rosemary Ames also have leading roles.

King Richard and the Crusaders (xx), on 5 at 3.30. An elaborate version of Sir Walter Scott's The Talisman. There are many battle scenes in the film which stars Rex Harrison, Virginia Mayo and Laurence Harvey.

Key to Ratings:
Excellent xxxx

Fair xx
Poor x

FRANK SINATRA
. . . on 7 at 6 p.m.

Pal Joey (xx), on 7 at 6. A pale version of a famed Broadway show about a nightclub singer who develops into a bit of a skunk. The tunes are good and so are the performances of some of the cast: Frank Sinatra, Kim Novak, and Rita Hayworth.

Island in the Sun (xx), on 12 at 11.30. A watered-down version of Alex Waugh's story about politics and romance in the British West Indies. Leading roles are played by James Mason, Joan Fontaine, Harry Belafonte and Dorothy Dandridge.

The Wrong Arm of the Law (xxx), on 2 at 11.40. A British spoof of crime films. Very funny. In the cast: Lionel Jeffries, Peter Sellers and Bernard Cribbins.

Judgment at Nuremberg (xxxx), on 8 at midnight. A well-made and well-acted film about the Nazi war crime trials. In this distinguished movie are Spencer Tracy, Burt Lancaster, Judy Garland, Richard Widmark, Montgomery Clift, Maximillian Schell and Marlene Dietrich.

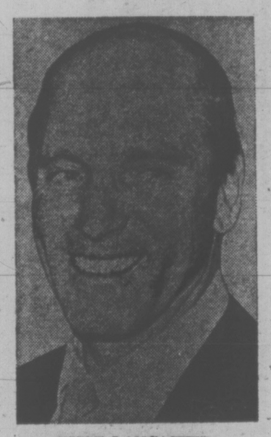
An American in Paris (xxxx), on 6 at 8.30. Marvelous Gershwin songs and eye-catching dance numbers by Gene Kelly and Leslie Caron are featured in this Oscar-winner about an American who wishes to remain in Paris after leaving the army. Almost everyone agrees it is one of the finest American musicals ever made.

Rachel, Rachel (xxxx), on 8 at 9. It's about a spinster-school teacher who breaks loose from her mental shackles at the age of 35 and begins to seek the love she never had. It's a remarkable film in which Joanne Woodward, as the teacher, turns in a superb acting job.

LESLIE CARON
. . . on 6 at 8:30 p.m.

Support Your Local Gunfighter, on 7 at 11. A lively farce with a Western flavor which sees two mine owners fighting over some gold and a fast-talking smoothie is caught in the middle.

Off Limits (xx), on 11 at 11. The action (or what there is of it) is mainly on an army post and about the training of a fighter. In the cast are Bob Hope and Mickey Rooney.



BURT LANCASTER
. . . on 8 at midnight

The Sand Pebbles, on 5 at 11.30. Filmed in Hong Kong and Taiwan, it deals with a U.S. gunboat's attempt to keep out of China's 1926 upheaval. Steve McQueen, Richard Crenna, Richard Attenborough and Candice Bergen are on board.

Record Program Changes As New Season Launched

By LES BROWN

NEW YORK — With high expectations and more than the customary seasonal fanfare, the three U.S. television networks have begun a fall season whose chief distinction, at least at the outset, is a record number of program changes.

More than one-third of the prime-time week (the peak viewing hours between 8 and 11 p.m.) has been reprogrammed. In all, 25 new series are being introduced—10 each by ABC and NBC, five by CBS — in the most extensive alteration of the schedule in more than two decades of competitive campaigns.

But if the networks' promotional efforts appear to make newness a virtue and a strong point, the fact is that the need to change more than a handful of shows for a new season has always been recognized by leaders in the television industry as a sign of weakness.

"New" may be a selling point when added to the label of a household product, but it has not normally been an enhancement for television programs. Rating histories have shown clearly that most devotees of television gravitate to the comfortably familiar programs at the expense of the new.

On the basis of past experience, knowledgeable broadcasting executives expect that at least 15 of the 25 new series will be cancelled by the time the schedules are drawn up for next September. Over the years, new program series on the networks have had a 60 per cent rate of failure.

Last fall presented a jarring exception; the failure rate rose to 85 per cent. Of the 20 new entries that had premieres in September, only three have been carried over into the present season, "Kojak," "Police Story" and "The Six Million Dollar Man."

Eight more shows were brought in to refresh the schedules in January, and of those, only two — "Happy Days" and "Apple's Way" — gained a sufficient following to earn renewals this fall.

Television programs survive on the networks, in the main if they are consistently able to attract 30 per cent of the television audience in their time periods, provided that a substantial number of those viewers are 18 to 49 years old, the "young adults" most prized by television's typical advertisers.

Those unable to command such an audience over a sustained period are considered competitive failures and are eliminated.

The lean harvest from last year's crop of new shows is a chief reason for the record overhaul of the schedule this season. It is a form of replanting. An executive of NBC-TV said his network's prime objective this season was to "establish aschedule of programs we can return next year."

New programming will occupy more than half the prime-time hours on NBC-TV this fall and somewhat more than one-third of the hours on ABC-TV. Only CBS-TV has made what may be considered a normal number of seasonal program changes.

Because it is venturing fewer new shows, CBS is bound to have fewer failures among the freshman entries. That and the network's rating momentum from last season has made CBS-TV the odds-on favorite, throughout most of the industry, to win this year's prime-time rating race.

Within the industry, the outcome of the race is of great matter since it will inevitably affect how the $4 billion in total advertising will be distributed next year.

Higher rating generally mean larger revenues, since the network with the greatest circulation is usually able to receive the highest advertising rates for its commercial minutes. Similarly affected are the local stations affiliated with the networks — about 200 each for CBS, NBC and ABC — which also price their commercial spots according to the age demographics and size of the audience delivered.

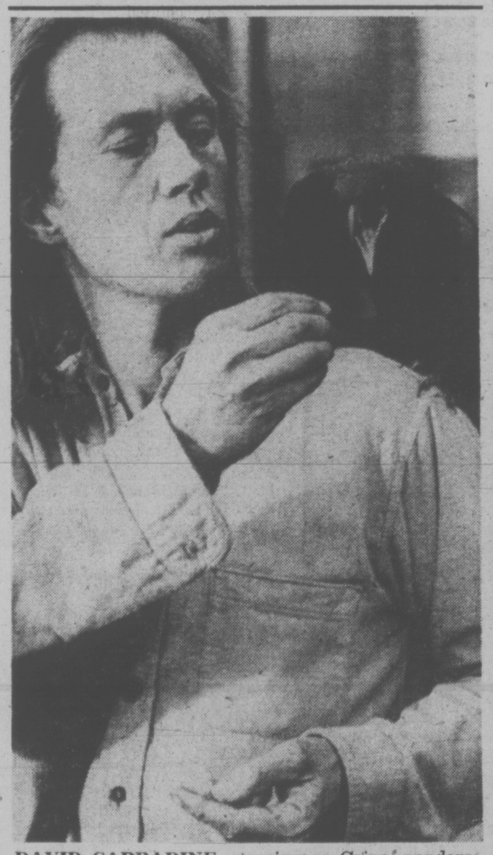
Baseball Fans Assured Of Expos on TV to '80

Canadian baseball fans have been assured of being able to follow the television play by play of Canada's only team in the major baseball leagues for a further six seasons.

The Montreal Expos baseball club have announced that a new agreement has been reached which will allow the telecasting of Expos games during the six-year period, 1975 through 1980.

CBC's French and English TV coverage of Expos games began with the Montreal team's entry in the National Baseball League. The opening game was April 8, 1969, with the Expos playing the Mets at New York, and it marked the first major league game involving a Canadian team.



DAVID CARRADINE, starring as Caine, ponders the truth of a report he will be pardoned by the emperor of China, hoping for guidance from a mysterious companion in Saturday's episode of Kung Fu on Channel 4 at 9.

Unwed Characters Sprout on TV

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

NEW YORK — Racial ethnic, single and unable to resist a wisecrack. It may not be a trend precisely, but that seems to be the most popular formula for situation comedies this season.

Taking them in descending order of effectiveness, there's "Rhoda" (New York Jewish) on CBS, "Chico and the Man" (Los Angeles Chicano) on NBC, and "That's My Mama" (Washington, D.C., black) on ABC.

Rhoda Morgenstern, formerly Mary Tyler Moore's friend and now on her own in a production, has been returned to her native New York City. Once rather plain and dumpy, Rhoda has become, through the magic of Valerie Harper, attractive and vivacious. Born in 1941 ("I always felt responsible for World War II"), she is unmarried but refuses to get too upset about it.

With the help of Ms. magazine, and without the support of a bra, Rhoda confronts the world with aggressive zanines. Sshe has Brenda (Julie Kavner), her younger and rather plain-dumpy sister, providing the foil Rhoda once provided for Mary Tyler Moore. She has her possessive mother (Nancy Walker). And she has quickly acquired a new boyfriend, recently divorced and father of a young boy.

Expertly produced, "Rhoda" offered some of the brighter moments of the new season so far. The characters are thoroughly familiar, if not overexposed types, but the cast is excellent, the pace is charmingly breezy, and the whole is cleverly threaded together with hilarious strands of urban madness.

The promise in "Chico and the Man" is less certain. Chico (Freddie Prinze) is a young Mexican-America partial to imitations, put-ons and stand-up comedy routines. The man, Ed Brown (Jack Albertson), is a crusty old geezer operating a garage in the barrio of East Los Angeles.

Ed doesn't like Chicanos, much the same as he doesn't like anybody. Living in filth and a mild alcoholic stupor, he is fond of recalling the days when it used to be a nice neighborhood with no taco stands. Chico arrives with an offer to help in the business but only in the role of full partner. Ed resists but, by the end of the first episode, Chico has moved into the garage, complete with a "se habla Espanol" sign.

The way is thick with insult humor. Much of the comedy in the situation, and even the look of the cluttered set, could have been transferred intact from the junkyard of "Sanford and Son."

Where does "Chico and the Man" go after the partnership has been established? Evidently, the racial - ethnic jokes will continue to be delivered. The business relationship can be manipulated, and with Chico being a bachelor, the possibilities for girl rtouble are endless.

In "That's My Mama," on the other hand, those seem to be the only possibilities. Clifton (Clifton Davis) is 25 years old, handsome and determined to keep on swinging. Mama (Theresa Merritt) is churchgoing and brimming with common sense wisdom, particularly in regard to Clifton's getting married and settling down. Clifton is a barber and his shop is attached to the family home, giving Mama a better opportunity to become involved in his doings. (See also Page 11A).

When a girl shows up to claim that he is the father of her infant son, Clifton becomes irate but confused. Mama becomes irate with Clifton but manages to retain enough common sense to finally expose the "jive hustle." Clifton puts his arm around Mama, shakes his head in wonderment and once again realizes that she is the top girl in his life. On TV that's known as warm family entertainment.

It is not that any of this is new on television. Archie Bunker can take the credit, or the blame, for reviving the racial-ethnic variety of comedy. It was not too big a jump from his routines with black neighbors to the reverse focus of "Sanford and Son." And the use of an unmarried person as a central focus was given respectability with "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

It's simply that the proliferation is so noticeable, even startling. In the case of unmarried characters, it is also somewhat puzzling, as TV and Madison Avenue are particularly anxious to attract the audience category referred to as "young marrieds."

Swimminging singles make notoriously poor TV watchers. But the young marrieds who once had the identificaion reflection of "The Dick Van Dyke Show" for marital fantasy comfort are now given the attractive single life-style of a Mary Tyler Moore, RHODA Morgenstern, right, played by Valerie Harper, temporarily moves in with her parents and finds that her mother (Nancy Walker) is soon waiting on her hand and foot. Sundays at 7 p.m. on Channel 12.

FLASH: Rhoda tops ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Rhoda series by CBS topped the ratings for television's premiere week, with its All in the Family second and NBC's Chico and the Man an unexpected third.

But ABC found some disappointing news in the ratings, as four of its seven new series shown Sept. 9 to 15 appeared at the bottom of he A. C. Nielsen ratings.

Six Million Dollar Man, shown Friday night, cashed in at 56th place out of 59 entertainment shows rated that week, with Kodiak, Texas Wheelers and Night Stalker helping to make it a bleak Friday for ABC.

Things didn't improve for the network Saturday as another entry, The New Land, finished last in the ratings.

Another six new entries to the viewing schedule—three on CBS and three on NBC—fared considerably better, placing among the 20 highest-rated programs of the week, during which 21 new series were offered by the three networks.

The three CBS shows were Rhoda, the Paul Sand Show and Manhunter, with the NBC winners Lucas Tanner, Little House on the Prairie and Chico and the Man.

SEAN CONNERY is embattled in Bond once again as Thunderball comes to television for the first time on ABC Sunday Night Movie. It's on Channel 4 at 9.

FIRST NIGHT guests on the Sonny Comedy Revue which premieres Sunday, Sept. 22, are Sally Struthers, Howard Cosell, and Michael Jackson. Sonny Bono has his own mixture of comedy and music.

"Villa Alegre" ("Happy Village"), a bilingual educational television series designed to appeal to young children of all social backgrounds, will open its premiere season on KCTS-9 Saturday, September 28, at 6:30 p.m. Thereafter, "Villa Alegre" will be seen on Sundays and Saturdays at 6:30 p.m.

Later the program can be seen during the instructional broadcast schedule for in-school use Mondays at 10:30 a.m.

The experimental series of half-hour shows is directed to youngsters from the age of four through eight. Using an equal mix of English and Spanish, the program aims to demonstrate for its viewers the advantages of the diversity of languages and cultures in the U.S.

Elwood's Luncheon Date Offers Longer Party

For the first time, Elwood Glover's Luncheon Date is available for a full-hour to CBC-TV viewers coast-to-coast when the show turned 12 this fall.

The popular noon-day talkfest — which celebrated its 12th birthday Sept. 9 — previously had only its second half-hour seen by Glover fans across the country; the first 30-minutes were enjoyed mostly by viewers in Toronto where the show is done live in the city's Four Seasons Motor Hotel.

Luncheon Date, which continues to be one of the few (if not the only) live Canadian talk shows seen nationally, also takes a daily four-minute break this season for a new 12:30 p.m. newscast.

Then the Mondays-to-Fridays get-together is back on the air with more top personalities from showbusiness and the arts — ranging A-Z, as in Charles Aznavour to Efrem Zimbalist Jr. (both of whom have appeared on Glover's show) — with attention paid not only to internationally-known stars but many of Canada's established, and not-so-established, personalities.

Among those who'll be dropping in semi-regularly for an on-camera visit are broadcaster-humorist Henry Morgan, and two very opinionated farmers, Charlie Farquharson and Fred C. Dobbs (alias Don Harron and Michael Magee). And an extra special visitor is slated for Luncheon Date on Good Friday — Mrs. Louise Tandy Murch, the occasion being her 100th birthday.

Whatever the occasion, the CBC-TV noontime party still offers spontaneous entertainment in a smooth, unruffled manner that owes a lot to Glover's 37 years in broadcasting. And the relaxed pace is suitably accompanied musically by the pleasing sounds of Sonny Caulfield's trio, led by the pianist-singer with Jimmy Amaro on bass and Bruce Farquhar on drums.

Producer of Luncheon Date is Drew Crossan, with assists from many other key behind-scenes people.

Movies

Battle of Algiers (xxxx), on 13 at noon. An award-winning re-creation of Algeria's efforts to overthrow French colonialism between 1954-62. Judged my many to be a film masterpiece, it manages to convey the realism of actual newsreel shots but in actual fact none of this was used.

Backtrack, on 8 at 12:45. Texas Rangers are doing their job along the Mexican border and they manage to convey a pleasing yarn about the Old West.

A Face in the Rain (xxx) on 11 at 1. An Italian-made film about how an American, Rory Calhoun, is sheltered from the enemy during the Second World War by the mistress of a German commandant.

Sergeant Rutledge (xx), on 5 at 3:30. A Western that serves up a mixture of rape, racial prejudice and courtroom drama without really doing much of anything.

TELLY SAVALAS
. . . on 6 at 2:05 a.m.

Alvarez Kelly (xxx), on 7 at 3:30. Tells what happens when a Southern guerrilla officer decides to rustle up a huge herd of cattle. The action scenes include a roaring stampede. Starring in this two-part movie are William Holden and Richard Widmark.

For Those Who Think Young (x), on 12 at 7. Surfing and romancing are much to the fore in this story of campus carrying-on. Nancy Sinatra is in the cast along with James Darren and Pamela Tiffin.

The California Kid, on 8 at 7:30. In this TV movie, star Martin Sheen tried to outwit a sheriff who has a novel way of eliminating speeders.

Either He's Quitting Or Putting on an Act

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — George C. Scott, acknowledged by many as the finest American actor performing today, says he will quit acting to devote himself to producing and direeting motion pictures.

Scott is not a frivolous man. He means what he says. And what he says is this:

"I intend to stop acting and will unless I go broke on this new picture ('The Savage is Loose'). But it is unlikely I'll go broke. We haven't released the film and we've already collected a $3 million advance.

"I'm a little tired of acting. Producing and directing take up all of a man's time. So that's what I intend to do with the rest of my life."

Scott's swan song movie is "The Hindenburg" at Universal. He plays a German Luftwaffe colonel.

He has refused to play the title role in "MacArthur," the film biography of Gen. Douglas MacArthur! He won his Oscar for "Patton" and feels he doesn't want to cover the same ground.

But is Scott retiring without playing a favored role?

"Yes," he said. "I've always wanted to play 'Macbeth.' It's too late now."

An introvert who has overcome a drinking problem, Scott will not miss the adulation and public commotion that goes with the acting territory.

"I always found it oppressive," he said. "It makes me uncomfortable. It has a separating effect which makes the actor more and more isolated. Before I became well-known I could go anywhere and study people, human nature. People don't behave the same around a celebrity and neither can the celebrity. It's a kind of psychological prison."

The Academy Award winner (who refused to pick up his Oscar) will miss acting, however.

"Yeah," he said in his raspy, gruff voice, "I'll miss sharing the life of a fictional character. Characters are the only eternal things actors come in contact with. They certainly outlive the actor.

"I hope I can use my acting experience to be a good director-producer. I don't believe in acting schools. It's good colleagues that count.

"I have some good qualities for directing: I'm very organized. I can think on my feet if things go awry. I can bob and weave and improvise on the basis of being well-prepared. I understand an actor's agony.

"And I have some bad qualities for directing: I'm terribly impatient. I'm inclined not to be concerned with personal problems of actors.

SCOTT . . . final salute?

"I've encountered directors who were compassionate and patient when I needed that sort of understanding. I will try to apply myself to those qualities when I direct — as I did in 'The Savage is Loose.' I directed and acted in that picture. I'm also distributing it."

Scott was asked how he would handle a rebellious young George C. Scott if such a man were included in the cast of one of his pictures.

"I shudder to think of it," Scott replied, grinning.

A very private man, Scott is essentially an intellectual. He is the sort of man most people want to know better. Few succeed.

As a producer and director he will achieve creative freedom he has never known as a performer. Freedom and independence mean more to George C. Scott than all the laurels and adulation he has ever received.

HOLLYWOOD ACTRESSES FILL BUT THREE ROLES

TORONTO — After seven years in Hollywood, Toronto actress Susan Clark has one major complaint about the movies — males are supreme in movies and women are nowhere.

"I'm out of my era," the 30-year-old actress said. "I belong in the Hollywood of the 1930s, when the Katharine Hepburns, the Bette Davises and the Garbos were the romantic heroines, allowed to display strong, interesting characterizations."

Miss Clark said today's Hollywood offers three stereotyped roles for women.

First, she said, is the "stoney-eyed harridan wife you know is a lady because she wears gloves."

Next is the "mystic hooker" with low-cut dress and her mangled grammar.

Then there's "the on-the-road, dead-from-the-neck-up freedom seeker."

"I've done all three," Miss Clark said.

Miss Clark left Toronto in 1966 for a $450-a-week contract with Universal Studios. She now earns roughly $35,000 a year.

But she has complaints.

"Universal has failed to shape me into an instantly identifiable commodity. But I guess I'm the only other Canadian actress, apart from Genevieve Bujold, who's made it in Hollywood."

Miss Clark said the seven years with Universal were years of "jungle fighting and scratching in a man's showbiz world," but said she enjoyed most of it.

"I've paid my union dues with a few scars, but I've travelled, met — fascinating movie people, and generally had a hell of a good time. No regrets."

CLARK

She found that the male superstars she has supported, among them Robert Redford, Clint Eastwood, Rock Hudson and Burt Lancaster, all seem to have certain things in common.

"They're all shy, retiring men, with very private personalities," she said.

Miss Clark now is actively engaged in becoming a film producer, seeking Canadian scripts that will allow her to show both her business and acting acumen.

She has obtained rights to Hugh MacLennan's novel Barometer Rising, about the Halifax explosion, and thinks the movie could be a Canadian Gone With The Wind if she can raise the estimated $6 million to produce it.

LAWRENCE WELK

The Wunnerful, Wunnerful Square

By SALLY QUINN

WASHINGTON — "When you finish your story you might like me or you might respect some things about me or," and he pauses to ponder, "you may just think I'm a complete cornball." He throws back his head and laughs, delighted with himself.

"A complete cornball," he says. "That's a new one."

There's no question that to a lot of people Lawrence Welk is a complete cornball. But there are millions of people, especially "little old ladies," who think Lawrence Welk is to die over.

Several hundred of them were at Woodward and Lothrop's downtown department store for an hour of book signing, before his sellout appearance in the evening at the Capital Centre.

Geriatric Set

When Welk, who became 71 in March, emerged from the escalator in his blue and white Hawaiian flowered print jacket, there was a unanimous sigh from the ecstatic geriatric set that had been waiting patiently in line, their copies of "Ah One, Ah Two!" cradled in their arms.

They grabbed at him and pushed to get closer to touch him. He stepped to the platform while they clapped and clutched each other, and held onto their chairs for support, and some cried a little.

"You're wunnerful, wunnerful" one woman piped up. "We love you," said another, and they clapped some more, beaming raptuously.

He made a few impromptu remarks — "On TV we all act like we're so perfect. In my book you'll find we are ah-human-ahtoo." The traces of accent are still there from being raised in a German-speaking family.

Gulp of Milk

And his fans clapped some more and pressed in close while he took a gulp of milk to soothe his spastic colon and then began signing autographs.

For over an hour, people eyeing him worshipfully would pass through and touch him softly. "We hear you twice every Sunday," many would say. Once from Baltimore, once from Washington. Said another: "My life's ambition was to meet Lawrence Welk."

He can't really seem to explain his appeal to women and blushes modestly when it is suggested that the ladies' squeals may be provoked by passion.

"Oh, I don't think I would have that image," he says hopefully. He can only explain it by saying that "ladies like to get extremely close. And I like the American mothers and their closeness. The ladies are my best audience. And it's an audience that's always had the brush-off. I'm a type of person who likes the ladies best. I point my orchestra toward the family, the mother. My understanding of mothers came from my early life."

Inner Conflicts

But poor Mr. Welk has had some inner conflicts in the mother area. "The thing that bothered me most in life is that the mothers of the girls I went out with always liked me best. And that troubled me. I knew they had marriage in mind for their daughter and that kinda chased me away."

When Welk finally did meet Fern, his wife of 43 years, "she was a nurse and I started making googly eyes." It worked, he says.

Welk likes all kinds of mothers, both working and nonworking, and he's not even against the Women's Movement. "It would be difficult for me to say I'm against working women when I've had a Champagne Lady on my show for 19 years.

Hates Sin

"I just like ladies," he says enthusiastically. "I like clean ladies and nice ladies."

"Clean" and "nice" are important words to Lawrence Welk, as are "dedication," "honesty," "obedience," discipline," "harmony and love." The world that puts fear in his Catholic heart is sin."

"I hate sin," he says vehemently. "The most severe sin" is to marry and cheat on your wife or even to sin before you get married. When I was 21, I had never heard of divorce. Sin is anything that you do to your system that damages you. Once the mind is damaged, once you have fallen into severe sin, once sin gets inbedded in you, it becomes more difficult to go straight. I think the good family life is the answer but a lot of families don't live righteously anymore."

There are some men who profess a rigid morality like Welk, yet lead quite debauched lives in private. Lawrence Welk — whether one thinks of him as hopelessly square or not — still comes across as a nice, pleasant, decent and honest man, certainly not a hypocrite. Though he likes to touch and squeeze a 'pretty girl's" hand now and then, he does not seem the type to run off with a baby faced chorus girl.

He does, however, feel he has one vice. "Power," he admits. "I felt I had too much power. I saw it at home among the farm people in North Dakota and I saw it in night clubs and ballrooms. When a man becomes too powerful he lowers the boom on people he works with. Nixon fits into that category. I had that and it was a bad experience. But then I find a pamphlet called 'How To Control Your Anger.' Thought it must have been written for me. It helped me find a way to take the power away from me and now I think I have cured this thing in life."

Low Moments

He feels it helped to bring those in his band ("My musical Family," as he subtitles his book) closer to him. He admits that life in the band has had its low moments but somehow through trying to conquer his anger and his compulsion to control he has managed to pull out of them.

It must have taken enormous control years ago when the Lennon Sisters, who Lawrence Welk had made into stars, quit his show to start their own. But he insists there are no hard feelings. "I felt they made a mistake," he says. "Sometimes when you build someone within an organization they may feel they can be successful alone but when you don't have 40 people to back you up it's not the same." He will admit that he believes the Lennon Sisters would still be stars today if they had stayed with him.

Probably the biggest frustration Lawrence Welk ever had in his career is that he is "basically a rhythm man, a man, a Dixieland man at heart." Unfortunately, that just won't fly with his fans. "I'm dying to do a swing show this winter," he said, "but my managers won't let me."

Left Farm

For Welk, who left the farm with his accordion on his 21st birthday because he didn't like "plowing, baling, shucking corn and milking cows," he compromiss is worth it.

"I'm out there for public relations," he says. "If I can't please my audience, then I'd rather not go out. I'm aware that my audience has brought me up from the low level where I started. They are my loyal fans. They really care. They are the American mothers."

Wild Ovation For Lucie Arnaz

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES — The audience at the Ahmanson Theatre premiere of Seesaw stood and cheered as the tall, dark-haired beauty stood alone on the empty stage.

This was Lucie Arnaz accepting the ovation of a hometown crowd that had been astonished by her display of talent in the musical play.

She sang in a manner that has reminded critics of a youth Ethel Merman. She danced with surprising agility. She sounded more like a tender Barbra Streisand than the daughter of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz.

Lucie's parents were both there the first night, and were as overwhelmed as the rest of the audience.

The 23-year-old Lucie said it was "the greatest night of my life. If I never have another night like it, I wouldn't care; I'd still be happy."

Many persons in the Seesaw audience were expecting to see a second-generation performer cashing in on her parents' fame.

How did Lucie manage such a polished performance?

"Well, I've been learning. I've spent a number of years making mistakes and asking questions so I can correct them . . ."

"I learned dancing by doing it. In six years on the Lucy show, I had a lot of good coaching from directors like Jack Baker and Jack Donahue.

"The singing came easily; I never really studied it, and I didn't get help from my parents.

Lucie is part of a new generation of stars' children who seem to be making it in show business.

Some others are Liza Minelli, Jane and Peter Fonda, David Carradine, Michael Douglas, Alan Alda, Beau and Jeff Bridges.

They are in contrast with a previous generation such as Edward G. Robinsos Jr., the Crosby boys and Harold Lloyd Jr. who were unable to find success in their parents' profession.

My Lai Villain In Notable Trial

LOS ANGELES — "This isn't some animal or monster. This is a human being who committed a monstrous act."

Producer-director Stanley Kramer was giving his interpretation of the misdeeds of Lieut. William Calley, convicted in the deaths of at least 22 civilians in the My Lai massacre in South Vietnam.

The Kramer version will be seen on ABC Television this fall as the third in his series of no-table trials.

"What happened?" Kramer mused on the day before starting the taping of the show. "How did William Calley go from Miami, Fla., to My Lai?

"I'm not going to supply any panacea, not even a middle-of-the-road panacea. But I will suggest his basic orientation, which was that the Red Chinese would be occupying San Francisco within two weeks.

"Those soldiers were indoctrinated. Anyone in a village could be the enemy — children, women, old people. The only answer was to 'waste' — kill everything that moved."

Kramer said he is no apologist for Calley, although the two men have become acquainted since the trial. The director went to Calley's trial with the intention of staying one day. He remained for five weeks.

A number of his movies dealt with seemingly unpopular issues. He treated bigotry in Home of the Brave and The Defiant Ones, war crimes in Judgment at Nuremburg, nuclear disaster in On the Beach, thought control in Inherit the Wind.

Kramer's television series started in January with The Trial of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. In June came The Court Martial of the Tiger of Malaya-Gen. Yamashita.

Tony Musante, of the Toma television series, plays the leading role in The Court Marial of Lieut. William Calley. Richard Basehart is the defence lawyer and Bo Hopkins the prosecutor.

Portrayal of Slave Brings High Honor

Cicely Tyson, who starred in the Emmy Award-winning drama special The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman, presented last season on the CBS Television Network, was recently honored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference for her portrayal of the fictional 110-year-old former slave.

Miss Tyson received the SCLC's hihgest honor, the Rosa Parks Award, at an awards banquet attended by Dr. Ralph Abernathy, Mrs. Coretta King and other SCLC leaders during the organization's 17th annual convention in Philadelphia. The Rosa Parks Award is presented each year to an individual "who has done the most in the struggle to help the suffering poor and bring about justice."

Also to be honored with special citations for their efforts in bringing the drama to television are Robert D. Wood, President, CBS Television Network; Fred Silverman, Vice President, Programs; Oscar Katz, Vice President, Programs, New York; C. Peter McColough, chairman of the board of the Xerox Corporation, full sponsor of the special on the Network; Robert Christiansen and Rick Rosenberg, producers of the special for Tomorrow Entertainment, Inc., and Ernest J. Gaines, author of the novel from which the drama was adapted.

"It is important for us to recognize the industry leaders who made this television event possible," said SCLC spokesman Stanley A. Culbreth in announcing the awards, "both to show appreciation for their efforts and to encourage the realistic portrayal of blacks on television."

AT LAST . . . ART CARNEY BECOMES MOVIE STAR

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Art Carney has finally become a movie star at 56 after a lifetime in theatre and television, much of it submerged in the identity of sewer worker Ed Norton.

Jackie Gleason's erstwhile sidekick in the old Honeymooners sketches beamed with pride on a visit to Hollywood to open his new film, Harry and Tonto.

"It's taken me 37 years to star in my first picture," he said in his unmistakable New Yorkese. "Look, Ma, I'm in the movies!

"I'm a kid with stars in my eyes. It's a helluva thrill to see my name on a marquee and watch people line up to pay to see me.

"When the picture opened in New York I talked to some of the people in the lobby. Most of them were senior citizens because I play a 72-year-old man hitch-hiking cross country with his cat, Tonto."

The picture is a study in hope and courage, a salute to an old gaffer who refuses to relinquish his relish for life.

Carney is brilliant. There isn't a trace of Ed Norton to be seen.

"Maybe so," he responded. "But unless I commit suicide I'll never get rid of Ed Norton. You don't shake a character like that ever. We only filmed 39 of those Honeymooner Half-hour shows. They were the best we ever did. And Jackie and I are still seen in those reruns.

"I starred on Broadway in The Man in the Dog Suit for a television special. I've toured in stock with The Prisoner of Second Avenue. But I'm still Norton to millions.

CARNEY
. . . 15 years ago

"People who see you every week for years never forget the role."

Carney doesn't resent his Norton image. He stood up in his hotel room and executed several silent Ed Norton routines which were hysterically funny.

The actor-comedian adjusted his hearing aid and delved further into his delight with his first starring film role.

"I wasn't a cat lover before this picture," he said. "Now I am. In the movie the cat's name is Tonto, and we got along fine. He never bit or clawed me in any of our scenes together.

"But W. C. Fields was right when he said an actor should never work with kids or animals. They do steal every scene they're in.

"We started the picture in New York and worked our way through Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Chicago, down to Arizona, Las Vegas and Los Angeles. When it was over I wanted to buy Tonto. His trainer wouldn't sell him."

Carney very nearly passed up the picture altogether.

"I was doing a play in summer stock when the director, Paul Mazursky, came up to see me," Carney explained. "I was doubtful I could be believable as a 72-year-old. I didn't want to play the part.

"Look, I haven't got any wrinkles. But we walked through some towns up in Maine, and around New York City studying the faces of old people — and some of them had smooth skin like mine.

"So I changed my mind. But I decided not to play the guy as a feeble old man with palsy. I grew a mustache and bought some old fashioned spectacles. They put false eyebrows on me, but that was all.

"Once we got going I really got into the character. Ed Norton didn't occur to me. The character even gave me an incentive to lose weight."

Carney is still on a diet. He once had a drinking problem. Now he doesn't touch booze.

Ed Norton should have it so good.

'Tinder Dry' in Woods

The fire hazard is high and approaching extreme on Southern Vancouver Island, the B.C. Forest Service reported as temperatures Thursday passed the record for that date.

While campfires haven't been banned, a spokesman said "anyone going into the woods should use extreme caution. It's tinder dry."

The hot weather is expected to continue over the weekend, but ease off from Thursday's 85 degrees to the lower 70s.

Previous record high for Sept. 19 was set in 1952, when the temperature hit 81.

Several small fires have been contained including two acres on Mount McDonald and two to three acres at national defence property at Pedder Bay.

A few hot spots are still being detected at the scene of the earlier Mount Finlayson fire.

Slash burning started by Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber in the Sooke area now is being mopped up. A forest service spokesman said there is no ban on slash burning.

Spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America said logging operations are normal in the Port Alberni area. In the Duncan area, some loggers are working half shifts but others full shifts depending on local conditions.

A two-acre fire in a remote area of Mount Douglas was contained Thursday by Saanich firefighters but a 12-man crew remained at the scene until dark. It stopped just short of heavy timber.

A forest fire on the United States side of Vedder Mountain, in the Fraser Valley, roared out of control Thursday night as winds up to 40 miles an hour whipped flames. It covered up to 200 acres.

Williams Changes Mind

Resources Minister Bob Williams said today he now has "an open mind" on B.C. government support for the 1980 Winter Olympics bid.

The province originally turned down a request for support in the bid by the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee but Williams said an announcement of new support by the federal government has "significantly changed" the situation.

Welfare Row Sees Basford, Mayors Balk

British Columbia municipalities are balking at having to pay $10 million because of the province's $100 million welfare blunder this year and Federal Revenue Minister Ron Basford says that Ottawa wants a full explanation of the situation before it pays a 50 per cent share of the tab.

"We'll be wanting an explanation before we shell out $50 million of the taxpayers' money," Basford said in Vancouver Thursday.

He termed the mistake an "amazing situation" and said the federal government would be interested in seeing provincial welfare records before handing over any money.

Several municipalities have already stated bluntly that they will not pay their share.

Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said the Municipal Act itself prevents municipalities from making any unbudgeted payments.

At the Union of British Columbia municipalities' meeting in Vernon Thursday, the mayors of Coldstream, Penticton, Vernon and Harrison Hot Springs also said they will resist any efforts to obtain money from their councils.

The 600 delegates attending the annual convention voted almost unanimously Thursday to seek a meeting with Premier Barrett and Human Resources Minister Norm Levi to discuss welfare cbsts.

Alderman Jack Gilmore of Coquitlam, brother of Education Minister Eileen Dailly, was one of the three dissenting delegates.

He called criticism of the government for the miscalculation premature.

Municipalities have been informed that their assessment for welfare costs has been increased to $1.05 per capita from 85 cents.

Municipalities pay 10 per cent of welfare costs, the provincial government pays 40 per cent and the federal government pays 50 per cent.

Premier Barrett has said the municipalities will have to pay their share of the added expenses caused by what he calls an error in budgeting.

Ald. Gilmore said municipalities complaining about high assessments for welfare should remember that under the Social Credit government they were assessed 20 per cent of welfare costs or $1.25 per capita.

Municipalities should also remember that welfare recipients are affected by inflation, he added.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said he expects to discuss the overspending on welfare with Barrett Monday. He wouldn't comment further on the miscalculation, saying that he only knows what he reads in the newspapers and they aren't always correct.

Socred MLA Alex Fraser, chairman of the public accounts committee of the legislature, said there is every likelihood the committee will investigate the overexpenditure.

Fraser (Cariboo) who is attending the UBCM meeting, said he has already contacted some of the committee members and they felt it "imperative that we look into this matter as soon as possible."

The former Quesnel mayor said it is his personal feeling that the committee must first find out how the overexpenditure occurred, why it occurred, discover the total amounts involved and look into Premier Barrett's statement that it was a clerical error.

Prices Jump In U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices shot up 1.3 per cent in August — a month when prices normally fall — and the real spending power of the average American worker with a family hit its lowest since December of 1970, the labor department reported Friday.

The leap in retail prices, which works out to an adjusted annual rate of 15.6 per cent, was foreshadowed by near-record wholesale price increases in the last two months.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO said the picture was even worse. He said the average worker's real earnings had fallen to the 1965 level, rather than that of 1970, and added: "This thing (inflation) is obviously gaining momentum at a frightening rate."

Factors leading the overall price increase included higher costs for mortgage interest, clothes, meats and medical services.

... LESS STEAK, CHAMPAGNE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. presidential economic adviser Alan Greenspan told a group including many representatives of the poor Thursday that the people who are being hurt worse by inflation are Wall Street stockbrokers.

His remark brought catcalls, jeering and an emotional appeal for his resignation.

While painting a gloomy picture of economic stagnation through mid-1975, Greenspan said in response to a question: "Everybody is hurt by inflation. If you wanted to examine who percentagewise is hurt the most, in their incomes, it's Wall Street stockbrokers. I mean their incomes have gone down the most."

Some members of the audience of 500 persons attending one of the Ford administration's series of economic conferences at the department of health, education and welfare booed and jeered the remark by Greenspan, new chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

"That's the whole trouble with the administration — Wall Street Brokers," shouted an unidentified member of the audience.

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference demanded Greenspan's resignation.

"To equate the plight of Wall Street financiers who may have to eat less steak and sip less champagne with the plight of the poor forced to eat dog food, and soon may have to eat the dog, is to state to this nation and to the world that we consider the poor expendable," the SCLC director said. Storm Kills Hundreds

BELIZE CITY, Belize (UPI) — Hurricane Fifi rammed into Central America Thursday, and drenched five countries, killing hundreds of persons in floods and tides whipped by winds of up to 130 miles an hour.

The storm wiped out millions of dollars of crops, particularly bananas and rice, as it tore up fertile farmland.

It left an estimated 200 persons dead in Honduras, where it was the worst storm to hit the northern part of that country in this century. Its wind and rains drenched a third of the nation and lashed neighboring Nicaragua, where authorities reported one child drowned.

Heavy rain and flood warnings were also reported in Guatemala and El Salvador, which felt the fringe of the storm.

Fifi slammed into Belize, formerly known as British Honduras at Placentia village, 72 miles south of Belize City.

It ploughed inland into the heart of the banana country, ravaging the towns of Cow Pen, Mango Creek and Siene Blight.

The U.S. national hurricane centre in Miami said the storm would lose force as it moved inland at a speed of 10 m.p.h., but officials there warned it could pick up strength again if it reached the Pacific Ocean. They said the primary danger was flooding.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in Belize, as authorities had already ordered coastal residents to shelters in higher ground.

Agricultural officials wrote off as a complete loss the Belize $1 million banana crop that had been sold in advance to the British Ffyffes firm.

The loss in human life on the northern coast of Honduras was high. Officials in Teguigalpa, the Honduras capital, said 150 bodies had already been recovered — many of them school children. The total death toll in Honduras was expected to rise to 200, but storm casualty figures were being assembled slowly.

The entire Honduras coastal region was isolated because of heavy flooding which wiped out road and all other communication, including air service. Bridges were washed out and homes beside river banks swept away.

Girl's Death: Man, 19, Held

A third year student at the University of British Columbia has been arrested in connection with the death of a 24-year-old Sooke woman earlier this month in Abbotsford.

Michael Patrick Milko, 19, of Chilliwack, appeared in Matsqui provincial court this morning charged with manslaughter.

His arrest came three days after the body of Linda Marlene Dueck of R.R. 2 Sooke was found in tall grass and water in a ditch beside the road less than half a mile from the Abbotsford RCMP station.

The partly-clad body had been in the ditch about three weeks before it was found Tuesday morning by a man looking for beer bottles.

Police believe the girl had been hitchhiking from Hope over th Labor Day weekend when she was picked up by the killer.

An autopsy failed to disclose the cause of death.

Milko was a resident in Cariboo House on the university campus and was in his third year of zoology specializing in genetics.

A student in the next room to his described him as gregarious, though a "loud talker," agreeable, and a conscientious worker.

"He used to hang a sign on his door saying 'come in and have a talk whenever you feel like it,'" the fellow student said.

Thieving Mailman Jailed

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg postman who received about $20,000 in the last four years by selling parcels he was to deliver to a shopping centre was sentenced to three years in prison Thursday.

Hilbert Honkey, 47, pleaded guilty to the theft charge last month and was remanded for sentence by provincial Judge Anthony J. Pilutik. He had no previous criminal record.

Crown counsel Willaim Morton told the court that Honkey, who has lost his job after 22 years with the post office, made arrangements with a woman living in West Winnipeg to steal the parcels if she would sell them.

Court was told that Honkey received $100 each time he made an exchange with the woman. He did not open the packages but judged their value from the stores to which they were to be delivered. His route included Polo Park, the largest shopping centre in the city.

Honkeey, a father of three, told the court he began stealing the parcaels to help pay the cost of medical treatment for his son.

Morton said it was almost impossible to estimate the total loss from the thefts. One business in the shopping centre almost went broke because of the losses, he said.

A woman is to appear in court in connection with the incidents.

Boy Leads Police In High-Speed Run

A 15-year-old juvenile was taken into custody following a 15-mile high-speed chase through Saanich early this morning.

Five police cars — two from Saanich, two from Victoria and one from Colwood RCMP — joined in the chase which ended on the Trans-Canada Highway at the start of the Malahat Drive.

Saanich police said they received a report of a stolen half-ton truck from the 3200 block Wascana at 2:20 a.m.

A patrolman spotted the vehicle 30 minutes later moving southbound on Interurban near Marigold.

When the driver refused to stop, police pursued at speeds up to 90 mph down Interurban to Burnside along Hampton to Wascana and onto the highway.

The spokesman said the truck went out of control a couple of times and weaved from one side of the road to the other, forcing some cars off the highway.

It was stopped at a roadblock opposite Hall's Rentals.

Minor damage was done to a police cruiser when the truck skidded into its rear end.

FBI 'Break-ins'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted a number of "surreptitious entries" or break-ins during the Nixon administration, according to once-secret testimony before the Senate Watergate committee.

The testimony, by former White House counsel J. Fred Buzhardt, disputes an assertion by former president Richard Nixon that such FBI activities had ceased in 1966.

500 Civil Servants Get 10.4% Pay Hike

Salary increases of 10.4 per cent have been approved for about 500 senior public servants not included in B.C. Government Employees Union.

The increases, retroactive to April 1, were approved by cabinet last week and revised the salary schedules set out in April, 1973.

John Mochrie, research officer for the Public Service Commission, told The Times today the 10.4 per cent increase awarded the management classification "is not expected to influence" negotiations now in progress with the employees union.

He disclosed that the salary increases already negotiated by four of the 13 union components are "in excess" of the increase granted the management group.

The 500 people covered by the management classifications include deputy ministers, senior departmental officers, legal offices, directors, superintendents, school principals and a whole range of other positions named by statute.

Principals salaries range from $1,670 per month to $1,913 per month.

Firing Squad Death

MOSCOW (UPI) — A military court has sentenced to a firing squad a Russian who returned to the Soviet Union on a Canadian passport, the government newspaper Izvestia said today. The court found him guilty of war crimes.

The newspaper said George Tsinaridzé, who held a Canadian passport under the name of David Geldiashvili, had participated in the deaths of more than 3000 persons in southern Russia when he was a member of a Gestapo squad in the city of Simferopol.

Lumber Layoffs Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Layoffs are continuing in the B.C. lumber industry with company officials laying the blame on a depressed lumber market.

Ontario Eggs Up

KEMPTVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ontario egg producers will be getting five cents a dozen more for their top three grades of eggs effective Monday, James Johnstone said Thursday.

Card-Carrying Pensioners Soon

OTTAWA (CP) — Standard identification cards may be available for Canada's old age pensioners by the end of the year.

Reports indicate the scheme could be passed by the Commons within two months although some officials caution it's unlikely to happen that soon.

The cards would serve as handy identification documents for men and women in the senior citizen category so they could readily take advantage of special reduced prices and other opportunities being offered to people over 65 by various levels of government, as well as by banks and other private organizations or agencies.

The cards would also qualify senior citizens for reduced fares or free ttravel on municipal or provincial public transit systems where the special benefits are already available.

Once the plan wins final endorsement from the health and welfare department, it's expected to move speedily through treasury board and the cabinet.

The only probable snag is a revival of the cries of "police state" which were first raised in 1957 when the Diefenbaker government attempted to introduce a uniform numbering system for all Canadians.

Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde has been meeting with provincial health ministers during a swing across the country this week and it's believed the ID card plan may be one of the points under discussion.

B.C. already operates a senior citizen identification program and issues cards to anyone over 65. A similar scheme is under active consideration by the Ontario government and could be adopted soon, if Parliament doesn't come out with a Canada-wide program first.

The federal program would differ from the one in B.C. in that only those who qualify for old age security benefits by meeting residency requirements would get the cards. In B.C., cards are given to all old enough to qualify.

Ford Faces Confrontation With Congress Over Funds

WASHINGTON (WP) — A plan by President Ford to seek a spending delay on about $20.3 billion in funds already approved by Congress could produce a serious constitutional confrontation with Congress over budget powers.

The plan was revealed by the president and budget director Roy Ash at a "working dinner" Tuesday night with congressional committee chairman and senior Republicans. Ford said delays, or in some cases outright cancellation, of projected spending are needed to battle inflation.

Although few details were available on the final plan, Senate budget ccommittee chairman Edmund S. Muskie (Dem., Maine), said he presumed most of the cuts would come from highway and water funds held up in the past but still not spent, such as $9 billion in water pollution funds still not released.

Muskie said it appeared that virtually all of the funds proposed for a holdup could come from appropriations voted in past years, with only about $600 million involved in the current fiscal year. It is expected that added cost for the current fiscal year will be proposed later.

From other sources, it was learned that the plan, at least as initially outlined, involves a holdup of spending on the $9 billion in water pollution project funds which Nixon had refused to spend, $10.7 billion in highway funds which also had been help up by Nixon, and about $600 million in 16 other small items.

Muskie said the dispute between Congress and Ford could arise not only over the wisdom of holding up specific items, but over the legal method used by the president.

He said the new budget law passed earlier this year authorized the president to hold up minor funds for "housekeeping" adjustments and project emergencies by simply declaring that he is deferring spending. The holdup in that case, automatically is effective unless vetoed by either chamber of Congress.

However, he said that when the president wants to hold up spending of major amounts for broad policy purposes — the case right now — he is required to use the method called rescission.

Under this method, much more difficult for the president, he must notify Congress and he cannot put his plan into effect unless he wins positive approval of both chambers of Congress.

Muskie said that he made plain his view that holding up funds for policy purposes by means of deferral, which Ash had indicated to him would be the method used on most of the items in the $20.3 billion total, would be a misuse of the deferral powers. He said it would constitute an illegal use of the easier deferral procedure to make cutbacks for policy reasons.

"If we treat that as it were a proper procedure, even if we succeed here in vetoing the deferral, that would be surrender in itself," said Muskie. "I don't think we ought to acquiesce in it."

But he said Ford had "indicated a very soft attitude, he's told Ash to get tougher with me" and as a result, a confrontation might be avoided.

MAYORS TO BATTLE FOR LOVE, NOT WAR

There'll be lots of racket Sept. 28 when Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith and Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria meet in court for battle.

But the two civic leaders will make love, not war — the meet is planned in conjunction with the finals of the Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament and the official opening of the Henderson Park tennis courts.

The opening will take place at the park at 1 p.m. and will be followed immediately by finals of the boys' and girls' singles in the Times tournament — which drew some 130 entrants from Greater Victoria.

At 2 p.m. it will be Smith vs. Pollen in the Battle of the Mayors, with 3 p.m. slated for men's and women's singles finals and presentation of trophy prizes by Times publisher Stuart Underhill.

Greg Miller, president of the Vancouver Island Lawn Tennis Association, will act as master of ceremonies for the event.

Demands 'Out of Proportion'

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Time Staff

Saanich School District teachers will seek a 21.8 per cent pay increase for 1975, agreements chairman John Costin said today.

Such a demand would be "really out of proportion to other increases," school board vice-chairman Ann Foerster responded.

The 315 teachers in the district will ask for a cost of living clause in addition to the increase, Costin said.

The figure is in line with the 20 to 25 per cent increase that B.C. Teachers' Federation president Jim MacFarlan predicted Thursday B.C. teachers would be seeking.

Costin said 13.1 per cent of the increase requested will simply cancel out the rise in the cost of living in the Victoria area. The teachers' share of the increase in Canada's gross national product is represented by 7.3 per cent, he said.

The rest, 1.4 per cent, is an increase to bring salaries of Saanich district teachers in line with the rest of the province.

Costin said the real issue this year will be who the teachers bargain with, Saanich school board or the B.C. School Trustees Association.

The Saanich board, and 68 other boards, have delegated their bargaining rights for teachers' salaries to the BCSTA. They want bargaining done by the two provincial bodies, not district by district.

Costin said the Saanich teachers have invited the BCSTA's negotiating team to begin bargaining Thursday morning at the school board office. He hasn't yet received a reply.

Trustee Foerster said wage demands such as the Saanich teachers are making "add fuel to the flame of inflation."

She said the board may be involved in some of the non-monetary items to be negotiated, but will leave all salary bargaining to the BCSTA.

Greater Victoria Teachers' Association won't decide what increase it will seek until next month, president Mavis DeGirolamo said.

'Rezoning' Definition Argued

What is actually meant by the word "rezoning" in B.C.'s Municipal Act, and does a city-initiated change in the regulations for any particular zone category constitute a rezoning?

The questions were argued with conflicting interpretations and conclusions in a B.C. Supreme Court hearing Thursday, which is expected to test a controversial Municipal Act amendment and influence the future handling of zoning procedures throughout the province.

E. J. Butler and Co. Ltd. and Garden City Motels Ltd., owners of four motels on Gorge Road — Oxford Tower Inn, Coachman Inn, Redwood Park Motel and Robin Hood Motel — launched proceedings against the city of Victoria claiming the city had contravened the act's requirements by failing to notify the motel owners before changing motel zoning regulations last March.

The bylaw amended the regulations for the city's T1 (transient accommodation) zone to permit motel-type operations with 100 beds or more to have pub licences.

The plaintiffs' statement of claim said the only Gorge motel meeting the 100-unit requirement, the Sherwood Park Motor Hotel, in fact had been operating a pub illegally for about a year before the regulations were changed, and therefore the bylaw effectively legitimized that practice.

Sherwood Park's pub "affected and continues adversely to affect" neighboring motels and has depreciated their property values, the statement claimed.

Douglas Gray, representing the motel firms, and Jakob de Villiers, Victoria's city solicitor, agreed in submissions before Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton Thursday that a ruling hinged on the interpretation of the word "rezoning" contained in a 1973 amendment to the Municipal Act.

The amendment, strongly criticized by municipal officials on grounds that it complicates and encumbers the zoning process, requires municipalities to notify by mail all "occupiers" of property potentially affected by a rezoning or land-use contract application.

Gray said such notification wasn't given in regard to the changed motel zone regulations, but it should have been because any change to a zone itself or to the land uses permitted in that zone constitutes a rezoning.

He argued that if the city wished to change the permitted land use in any specific area it had only two choices: to transfer the area from its present zoning classification to a new one, or to pass a bylaw changing the regulations governing present land use within the zone. In either case, the action would amount to a rezoning.

For the city, however, de Villiers claimed that the ordinary meaning of rezoning implied changing the "geographical identity" of an area, by taking it out of one zone and placing it in another.

In the case of the Gorge Road motel regulations, he said, the bylaw challenged by the plaintiffs merely effected a "minor change" to permit the sale of liquor as an ancillary use to the zone's primary use, tourist accommodation.

"If the bylaw had gone so far as to prohibit the use of the zone for accommodation purposes and had entirely changed the character of the zone then there would be substance for the argument that council in fact rezoned the area," de Villiers stated.

In brief rebuttal of de Villiers' argument, Gray said the revised regulations were more significant in their repercussions than had been implied, and had resulted in a "very substantial change" to the character of the neighborhood.

Wootton is expected to hand down his judgment within two weeks.

A PASSIVE COUP took place in Victoria's Royal London Wax Museum Thursday, with Michelle Poulson (right) single-handedly unseating a U.S. president — Richard Nixon complete with waxy pre-Watergate smile — and Teresa Edwards installing his more sober-faced successor, Gerald Ford. "And that, as far as we're concerned, seems to wrap up the whole ball of wax," joked one onlooker.

Car Bodyshops Ignore ICBC In Rate Hikes

Automobile bodyshops in Victoria will raise their rates $2 an hour Oct 1 and customers will have to pay the extra charge, the Victoria president of the Automotive Retailers Association said today.

Dennis Butner, bodyshop manager of National Motors, said the labor rate will rise from $14 to $16 per hour in the 37 ARA-affiliated garages in Victoria Oct. 1.

"We have no quarrel with the Insurance Corporation of B.C., but the rates must be higher for us to operate at a reasonable profit," Butner said.

He said that as of Oct. 1, unless the ICBC agrees to the rate hike, the $2 per hour extra rate will be charged to customers.

"We'll make out the work order using the $16 per hour rate for labor and the differential will have to be paid by the customer."

In Vancouver, Lloyd Kinneard, secretary-manager of the B.C. ARA, said the rates hikes will affect garages in the Fraser Valley, the Okanagan and the Cariboo, as well as Greater Victoria.

Vancouver garages are not expected to raise their rates.

Kinneard said rising material costs and a shortage of skilled bodymen have caused the need for the price increase.

ICBC plans no immediate action to deal with the impending hike, a spokesman for the Crown agency said Thursday.

He said the corporation is conducting a study of bodyshop rates and no action is expected until the study is completed.

"We want to find out to what extent bodyshop operators may be in trouble and to what extent rate increases may be justified," he said.

No indication was given how long the study would take.

COPTER RESCUES STRANDED HUNTER

A deer stalker who twisted his leg and became stranded beside a creek bed 1,500 feet below a ridge he was hunting late Thursday was airlifted to a Victoria hospital by RCMP helicopter this morning.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said Clair Waterworth, believed to be in his 40's, of 643 Kelly in Colwood, became separated from his partner, Jack Lewis, of the same address, while the two were hunting in the Bear Creek area between Shawnigan and Port Renfrew.

A police spokesman said Lewis spotted a camp fire at the base of the ridge and alerted police and rescue authorities in Shawnigan and Duncan.

But rough terrain and windy conditions prevented Waterworth's removal until daybreak, he said.

The injured hunter, tired and thirsty after a sleepless night, was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where his condition at noon today was listed as good.

OAK BAY SPARES BOULEVARD OAK

One of Oak Bay's older residents, an oak tree on the boulevard at 1440 Beach Drive, was spared Thursday by the municipal council's B committee.

Edith J. Olson of 1440 Beach wrote the committee complaining that the tree spoiled the view of Mt. Baker from her fifth-floor apartment, and asking that it be pruned and the top cut off.

Municipal engineer Geoff White warned that if the tree were lopped off to improve the fifth-floor view, fourth and third-floor apartment dwellers may also want it cut.

The request was denied.

Vic West to Discuss Community Centre

Members of the Victoria West Community Development Assocation will meet with city officials Monday to discuss location and other details of the proposed community centre to be built under Neighborhood Improvement Program funds.

Nearly 80 per cent of the 343 Victoria West residents surveyed nominated a community centre as the area's top priority for spending its share of the $2 million in NIP funds allocated to Vic West and James Bay.

After results of the survey were announced at an association meeting Thursday, Ald. Bill Tindall predicted city council would go along with the group's major proposals.

According to the survey, residents generally favor locating the centre in Banfield Park, although the association has indicated it prefers Vic West Park.

Among other recommendations, the association is urging city council to designate the whole of Vic West as a neighborhood improvement area, to make all residents eligible for low-interest loans to renovate their homes.

Anti-Marina Blitz Eyed

The Tsawout Indian Band will start an area-wide blitz Monday to get signatures on a petition opposing the planned Saanichton Bay Marina.

Band manager Gus Underwood Jr., said today the petition will be taken door-to-door in Central Saanich and put in stores, garages all over the Victoria area. He said members of other Indian bands in the area had agreed to take the form to work with them.

More than 75 people from the Tsawout and other Indian bands in the area attended a meeting on the East Saanich reserve Thursday night and mapped out plans for the petition blitz.

Underwood said the petition will be presented to the provincial government and to marina developer George Wheaton.

He emphasized that it was not only the Tsawout Band which was opposing the 1,130-berth marina proposal, but other Central Saanich residents and other Indian bands which also depend on the bay for fishing and hunting.

Underwood said Resources Minister Bob Williams, who must give approval for the granting of a foreshore lease to the developers, has agreed to meet with the Tsawout Band, other groups opposing the project and citizens of Central Saanich.

A tentative meeting date has been set for Friday at 1 p.m.

A marine biologist from the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control (SPEC) in Vancouver is expected at the reserve later today to go over the impact studies that have already been done on the project and to look at the site.

Underwood said he is getting more calls and letters every day from people all over the Victoria area who are opposed to the project.

Turmoils Listed In Priory Trial

Counsel for the Society of the Love of Jesus said in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday he feels obliged to offer evidence the religious community has been in a state of turmoil for decades.

Cecil Branson said the society must answer the allegation by the five plaintiffs suing it that the present prioress, Mother Leonette Hoesing, has systematically tried to destroy the community since she took charge of it nine years ago.

He introduced a series of letters, some dating back 30 years, which detailed clashes between members and with church authorities.

Branson said his aim is to show the society, founded in 1922 and transferred from Anglican to Roman Catholic church in 1936, was "built on a bed of sand" and has been in repeated turmoil.

The situation left Mother Leonette with "an impossible task," he said.

The society, which has assets estimated at $1.5 million, operates an extended care hospital and home for the aged at St. Mary's Priory in Langford.

Plaintiffs in the case, who have been called the "traditional" faction in the long-standing internal dispute, include Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd, 85, the society's founder and its prioress for 39 years. She retired in 1961 because of ill health and now operates an animal shelter at Mill Bay.

The "modern" faction includes Mother Hoesing and has the backing of the Roman Catholic Church.

Earlier in the day, Sister Mary Agnes Eaton, one of the plaintiffs, denied having stolen some notes from the priory room of Hoesing, saying she took them because she believed they might be important to the court case.

She also denied that letters produced by Branson from church files constituted complaints but at one point Mr. Justice H. C. McKay interjected to note: "the picture I have is of a very unhappy community."

The trial, at the Law Courts, enters its 10th day Monday.

Hush Surrounds Spectacle Lake

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

There are not many parks near urban areas where you can get away from the sound of traffic, but tucked away in hilly Malahat is Spectacle Lake where you are more likely to hear the call of kingfishers than the whining of motor cars.

The small provincial park, situated 600 feet above sea level, is accessible via an unpaved road located on the west side of the Trans-Canada Highway about 2,500 feet passed the Shawnigan Lake cutoff.

A tree belt, plus its distance — about a mile — from the highway, is probably the reason why so little man-made noise is heard in the park.

According to Indian legends, the powerful mythical creature Thunderbird and his sons lived in the Malahat and Spectacle Lake was their source of water supply.

And Malahat Indians claim before the white man destroyed the magic of Spectacle Lake by logging its big trees and cutting up the landscape with roads, the water had curative powers.

Bike Mishap Injures Two

Two young men were taken to hospital Thursday night after the motorcycle they were riding left Esquimalt Road and landed in a gully.

City police said today the motorcyclist was Samuel Essler, 22, of 3319 Whittier, and his passenger Reginald Belfitt, 20, of 1045 Rockland.

Essler was treated for bruises at Victoria General Hospital and released, but Belfitt was still in hospital today suffering from a fractured leg.

Police estimated damage to the motorcycle at $1,000.

'Tinder Dry' in Woods

The fire hazard is high and approaching extreme on Southern Vancouver Island, the B.C. Forest Service reported as temperatures Thursday passed the record for that date.

While campfires haven't been banned, a spokesman said "anyone going into the woods should use extreme caution. It's tinder dry."

The hot weather is expected to continue over the weekend, but ease off slightly from Thursday's 85 degrees.

Previous record high for Sept. 19 was set in 1952, when the temperature hit 81.

Several small fires have been contained including two acres on Mount McDonald and two to three acres at national defence property at Pedder Bay.

A few hot spots are still being detected at the scene of the earlier Mount Finlayson fire.

Slash burning started by Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber in the Sooke area now is being mopped up. A forest service spokesman said there is no ban on slash burning.

Spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America said logging operations are normal in the Port Alberni area. In the Duncan area, some loggers are working half shifts but others full shifts depending on local conditions.

A two-acre fire in a remote area of Mount Douglas was contained Thursday by Saanich firefighters but a 12-man crew remained at the scene until dark. It stopped just short of heavy timber.

A forest fire on the United States side of Vedder Mountain, in the Fraser Valley, roared out of control Thursday night as winds up to 40 miles an hour whipped flames. It covered up to 200 acres.

Williams Changes Mind

Resources Minister Bob Williams said today he now has "an open mind" on B.C. government support for the 1980 Winter Olympics bid.

The province originally turned down a request for support in the bid by the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee but Williams said an announcement of new support by the federal government has "significantly changed" the situation.

Welfare Row Sees Basford, Mayors Balk

British Columbia municipalities are balking at having to pay $10 million because of the province's $100 million welfare blunder this year and Federal Revenue Minister Ron Basford says that Ottawa wants a full explanation of the situation before it pays a 50 per cent share of the tab.

"We'll be wanting an explanation before we shell out $50 million of the taxpayers' money," Basford said in Vancouver Thursday.

He termed the mistake an "amazing situation" and said the federal government would be interested in seeing provincial welfare records before handing over any money.

Several municipalities have already stated bluntly that they will not pay their share.

Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said the Municipal Act itself prevents municipalities from making any unbudgeted payments.

At the Union of British Columbia municipalities' meeting in Vernon Thursday, the mayors of Coldstream, Penticton, Vernon and Harrison Hot Springs also said they will resist any efforts to obtain money from their councils.

The 600 delegates attending the annual convention voted almost unanimously Thursday to seek a meeting with Premier Barrett and Human Resources Minister Norm Levi to discuss welfare costs.

Alderman Jack Gilmore of Coquitlam, brother of Education Minister Eileen Dailly, was one of the three dissenting delegates.

He called criticism of the government for the miscalculation premature.

Municipalities have been informed that their assessment for welfare costs has been increased to $1.05 per capita from 85 cents.

Municipalities pay 10 per cent of welfare costs, the provincial government pays 40 per cent and the federal government pays 50 per cent.

Premier Barrett has said the municipalities will have to pay their share of the added expenses caused by what he calls an error in budgeting.

Ald. Gilmore said municipalities complaining about high assessments for welfare should remember that under the Social Credit government they were assessed 20 per cent of welfare costs or $1.25 per capita.

Municipalities should also remember that welfare recipients are affected by inflation, he added.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said he expects to discuss the overspending on welfare with Barrett Monday. He wouldn't comment further on the miscalculation, saying that he only knows what he reads in the newspapers and they aren't always correct.

Socred MLA Alex Fraser, chairman of the public accounts committee of the legislature, said there is every likelihood the committee will investigate the overexpenditure.

Fraser (Cariboo) who is attending the UBCM meeting, said he has already contacted some of the committee members and they felt it "imperative that we look into this matter as soon as possible."

The former Quesnel mayor said it is his personal feeling that the committee must first find out how the overexpenditure occurred, why it occurred, discover the total amounts involved and look into Premier Barrett's statement that it was a clerical error.

Prices Jump In U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices shot up 1.3 per cent in August — a month when prices normally fall — and the real spending power of the average American worker with a family hit its lowest since December of 1970, the labor department reported Friday.

The leap in retail prices, which works out to an adjusted annual rate of 15.6 per cent, was foreshadowed by near-record wholesale price increases in the last two months.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO said the picture was even worse. He said the average worker's real earnings had fallen to the 1965 level, rather than that of 1970, and added: "This thing (inflation) is obviously gaining momentum at a frightening rate."

Factors leading the over-all price increase included higher costs for mortgage interest, clothes, meats and medical services.

. . . LESS STEAK, CHAMPAGNE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. presidential economic adviser Alan Greenspan told a group including many representatives of the poor Thursday that the people who are being hurt worse by inflation are Wall Street stockbrokers.

His remark brought catcalls, jeering and an emotional appeal for his resignation.

While painting a gloomy picture of economic stagnation through mid-1975, Greenspan said in response to a question: "Everybody is hurt by inflation. If you wanted to examine who percentagewise is hurt the most, in their incomes, it's Wall Street stockbrokers. I mean their incomes have gone down the most."

Some members of the audience of 500 persons attending one of the Ford administration's series of economic conferences at the department of health, education and welfare booed and jeered the remark by Greenspan, new chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

"That's the whole trouble with the administration — Wall Street Brokers," shouted an unidenfified member of the audience.

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference demanded Greenspan's resignation.

"To equate the plight of Wall Street financiers who may have to eat less steak and sip less champagne with the plight of the poor forced to eat dog food, and soon may have to eat the dog, is to state to this nation and to the world that we consider the poor expendable," the SCLC director said. Storm Kills Hundreds

BELIZE CITY, Belize (UPI) — Hurricane Fifi rammed into Central America Thursday and drenched five countries, killing hundreds of persons in floods and tides whipped by winds of up to 130 miles an hour.

The storm wiped out millions of dollars of crops, particularly bananas and rice, as it tore up fertile farmland.

It left an estimated 200 persons dead in Honduras, where it was the worst storm to hit the northern part of that country in this century. Its wind and rains drenched a third of the nation and lashed neighboring Nicaragua, where authorities reported one child drowned.

Heavy rain and flood warnings were also reported in Guatemala and El Salvador, which felt the fringe of the storm.

Fifi slammed into Belize, formerly known as British Honduras, at Placentia village, 72 miles south of Belize City.

It ploughed inland into the heart of the banana country, ravaging the towns of Cow Pen, Mango Creek and Siene Blight.

The U.S. national hurricane centre in Miami said the storm would lose force as it moved inland at a speed of 10 m.p.h., but officials there warned it could pick up strength again if it reached the Pacific Ocean. They said the primary danger was flooding.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in Belize, as authorities had already ordered coastal residents to shelters in higher ground.

Agricultural officials wrote off as a complete loss the Belize $1 million banana crop that had been sold in advance to the British Ffyffes firm.

The loss in human life on the northern coast of Honduras was high. Officials in Teguigalpa, the Honduras capital, said 150 bodies had already been recovered many of them school children. The total death toll in Honduras was expected to rise to 200, but storm casualty figures were being assembled slowly.

The entire Honduras coastal region was isolated because of heavy flooding which wiped out road and all other communication, including air service. Bridges were washed out and homes beside river banks swept away.

Girl's Death: Man, 19, Held

A third year student at the University of British Columbia has been arrested in connection with the death of a 24-year-old Sooke woman earlier this month in Abbotsford.

Michael Patrick Milko, 19, of Chilliwack, appeared in Matsqui provincial court this morning charged with manslaughter.

His arrest came three days after the body of Linda Marlene Dueck of R.R. 2 Sooke was found in tall grass and water in a ditch beside the road less than half a mile from the Abbotsford RCMP station.

The partly-clad body had been in the ditch about three weeks before it was found Tuesday morning by a man looking for beer bottles.

Police believe the girl had been hitchhiking from Hope over the Labor Day weekend when she was picked up by the killer.

An autopsy failed to disclose the cause of death.

Milko was a resident in Cariboo House on the university campus and was in his third year of zoology specializing in genetics.

A student in the next room to his described him as gregarious, though a "loud talker," agreeable, and a conscientious worker.

"He used to hang a sign on his door saying 'come in and have a talk whenever you feel like it,'" the fellow student said.

Thieving Mailman Jailed

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg postman who received about $20,000 in the last four years by selling parcels he was to deliver to a shopping centre was sentenced to three years in prison Thursday.

Hilbert Honkey, 47, pleaded guilty to the theft charge last month and was remanded for sentence by provincial Judge Anthony J. Pilutik. He had no previous criminal record.

Crown counsel Willaim Morton told the court that Honkey, who has lost his job after 22 years with the post office, made arrangements with a woman living in West Winnipeg to steal the parcels if she would sell them.

Court was told that Honkey received $100 each time he made an exchange with the woman. He did not open the packages but judged their value from the stores to which they were to be delivered. His route included Polo Park, the largest shopping centre in the city.

Honkey, a father of three, told the court he began stealing the parcaels to help pay the cost of medical treatment for his son.

Morton said it was almost impossible to estimate the total loss from the thefts. One business in the shopping centre almost went broke because of the losses, he said.

A woman is to appear in court in connection with the incidents.

Boy Leads Police In High-Speed Run

A 15-year-old juvenile was taken into custody following a 15-mile high-speed chase through Saanich early this morning.

Five police cars — two from Saanich, two from Victoria and one from Colwood RCMP — joined in the chase which ended on the Trans-Canada Highway at the start of the Malahat Drive.

Saanich police said they received a report of a stolen half-ton truck from the 3200 block Wascana at 2:20 a.m.

A patrolman spotted the vehicle 30 minutes later moving southbound on Interurban near Marigold.

When the driver refused to stop, police pursued at speeds up to 90 mph down Interurban to Burnside along Hampton to Wascana and onto the highway.

The spokesman said the truck went out of control a couple of times and weaved from one side of the road to the other, forcing some cars off the highway.

It was stopped at a roadblock opposite Hall's Rentals.

Minor damage was done to a police cruiser when the truck skidded into its rear end.

FBI 'Break-ins'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted a number of "surreptitious entries" or break-ins during the Nixon administration, according to once-secret testimony before the Senate Watergate committee.

The testimony, by former White House counsel J. Fred Buzhardt, disputes an assertion by former president Richard Nixon that such FBI activities had ceased in 1966.

500 Civil Servants Get 10.4% Pay Hike

Salary increases of 10.4 per cent have been approved for about 500 senior public servants not included in B.C. Government Employees Union.

The increases, retroactive to April 1, were approved by cabinet last week and revised the salary schedules set out in April, 1973.

John Mochrie, research officer for the Public Service Commission, told The Times today the 10.4 per cent increase awarded the management classification "is not expected to influence" negotiations now in progress with the employees union.

He disclosed that the salary increases already negotiated by four of the 13 union components are "in excess" of the increase granted the management group.

The 500 people covered by the management classifications include deputy ministers, senior departmental officers, legal officers, directors, superintendents, school principals and a whole range of other positions named by statute.

Principals' salaries range from $1,670 per month to $1,913 per month.

NEWS BRIEFS

Firing Squad Death

MOSCOW (UPI) — A military court has sentenced to a firing squad a Russian who returned to the Soviet Union on a Canadian passport, the government newspaper Izvestia said today. The court found him guilty of war crimes.

The newspaper said George Tsinaridze, who held a Canadian passport under the name of David Geldiashvili, had participated in the deaths of more than 3000 persons in southern Russia when he was a member of a Gestapo squad in the city of Simferopol.

Lumber Layoffs Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Layoffs are continuing in the B.C. lumber industry with company officials laying the blame on a depressed lumber market.

Triangle Pacific Forest Products Ltd., said Thursday it is laying off 200 people as of Monday at its sawmill operation in Slocan in the southern B.C. interior.

Ontario Eggs Up

KEMPTVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ontario egg producers will be getting five cents a dozen more for their top three grades of eggs effective Monday, the Egg Marketing Board said Thursday.

Card-Carrying Pensioners Soon

OTTAWA (CP) — Standard identification cards may be available for Canada's old age pensioners by the end of the year.

Reports indicate the scheme could be passed by the Commons within two months although some officials caution it's unlikely to happen that soon.

The cards would serve as handy identification documents for men and women in the senior citizen category so they could readily take advantage of special reduced prices and other opportunities being offered to people over 65 by various levels of government, as well as by banks and other private organizations or agencies.

The cards would also qualify senior citizens for reduced fares or free travel on municipal or provincial public transit systems where the special benefits are already available.

Once the plan wins final endorsement from the health and welfare department, it's expected to move speedily through treasury board and the cabinet.

The only probable snag is a revival of the cries of "police state" which were first raised in 1957 when the Diefenbaker government attempted to introduce a uniform numbering system for all Canadians.

Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde has been meeting with provincial health ministers during a swing across the country this week and it's believed the ID card plan may be one of the points under discussion.

B.C. already operates a senior citizen identification program and issues cards to anyone over 65. A similar scheme is under active consideration by the Ontario government and could be adopted soon, if Parliament doesn't come out with a Canada-wide program first.

The federal program would differ from the one in B.C. in that only those who qualify for old age security benefits by meeting residency requirements would get the cards. In B.C., cards are given to all old enough to qualify.

You Can Still Take Flyer On Old Chinese Issue

By NANCY L. ROSS

WASHINGTON (WP) — What do bonds issued by the Chinese government in 1913 have in common with the Sabre Pinon Uranium Co.?

Little, it would seem, had they not both been brought to the attention of Micheline Masse (pronounced Mas-SAY). This Montreal businesswoman heads the Stock Market Information Service Inc., a firm that specializes in tracing old stocks and bonds the way genealogists trace family trees.

Yet, whereas ancestor hunters are generally looking for fame — a dukedom granting descendants the right to a fancy crest — Miss Masse is unabashedly looking for fortune, the cash value of long-forgotten and no longer traded stocks. In the past five years her service has discovered more than half a million "lost" dollars hiding in so-called worthless certificates.

The Chinese bonds, issued by the first republican government after the fall of the Manchu dynasty and sold in the United States by its first president, Sun Yat-sen, were traced to London, where they are still traded on the stock exchange. Despite the People's Republic's refusal to honor the bonds of a previous regime, they have a cash value with speculators.

Money men are gambling the bonds can be redeemed if and when the United States government requires the People's Republic of China to honor the claims of American citizens in exchange for unfreezing Chinese assets in this country. (In the same way some Russian Imperial bonds, issued by the czars, are still traded privately in New York and elsewhere.)

The Chinese bonds were due to mature in 1960, but payment was stopped back in 1937. In 1910 they had a face value of 100 pounds sterling ($486) each. Backed by gold, they are each worth 12 pounds ($29) today, many wars and governments later.

Thus, to the owner the Chinese bond with its ornate chops and multilingual offering represents more of a conversation piece than a redeemable investment. Still, the bond owners are luckier than 90 per cent of Miss Masse's clients whose certificates proved truly worthless. It's that tenth client who makes her paper treasure hunt worthwhile — and profitable.

Two years ago a Miami engineer decided to risk the fee to check out the uranium stocks he had purchased in the early 1950s. He was informed four of the five companies in which he invested had died a natural death. The fifth, Sabre Pinon Uranium Co., was found to have merged with United Nuclear Corp. His 2,000 shares had a market value of $36,000.

The Masse firm is limited to informing its clients of the stock's value and the company's address. It does not arrange the sale. Nor does it have the power to investigate a company to be sure it is honest when it declares its old certificates have no value. Investors in fly-by-night companies are usually out of luck.

Stock Market Information Service charges a flat $20 per company plus a photocopy of the certificate. The fee is refunded if it cannot locate the company — a rare occurence — but not, however, if the stock proves worthless. Its services are geared to the erstwhile investor or recipient of certificates who doesn't have a broker.

While major brokerage houses will do the same research free for customers (their profit comes in a percentage sales commission), Miss Masse claims to have the world's only firm devoted to the sole business of certificate research.

When interviewed recently in Washington, she was hot on the trail of some old American real estate stock. Eighty per cent of her firm's work is condueted in this country, although it also has clients and does research in Western Europe, Latin America, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and Hong Kong.

This profession developed a dozen years ago when Micheline Masse decided to paper her living room walls with a friend's "worthless" stock certificates. Before the housewife could apply the paste, though, the business student instinct in her made her wonder if they might possibly have some value.

A quick trip to the library and some digging in musty old business directories revealed the firm had long ago sold out to a large corporation. Yet, upon calling the corporation, she found one old stock actually had a cash value of $2,000.

She returned the certificate to its delighted owner who, promptly spread the news of her good fortune. So did Miss Masse's stockbroker husband, Joseph Bonneau. Soon she found herself deluged with requests from friends and strangers alike to trace old certificates. Seven years later, after her third child entered school, she decided to turn her hobby into a business.

GOLD BALLOON DEFLATED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The price of gold will not take off to astronomical heights, economist Dr. Maurice Levi of the University of British Columbia commerce faculty said Thursday.

He told members of the Vancouver Society of Financial Analysts that he based his prediction on prospective developments in the international financial system, prospective developments in the equity market, the element of risk in gold and the demand of U.S. citizens for gold when it becomes legal for them to hold in it January, 1975.

Italy has been allowed to use gold as collateral for loans and "the suggestion in this is that gold be demonetized."

"If this happens, it means the central banks will sell gold, though it wouldn't all be dumped at once," he said.

"If gold ends up on the market, the price will fall. In 10 years the central banks won't hold gold. Even with a flexible exchange rate there is no need to hold either foreign exchange or gold."

Over-Border Ad Clamps Hinted

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal government is considering legislative action forbidding advertisers to deduct expenditures on United States television stations from taxable revenue.

The newspaper says a spokesman for Finance Minister John Turner said Thursday he was unaware of any discussion of the issue, but he added it would probably develop either in the Communications Department or the Secretary-of-State Department, both of which are concerned with broadcasting and cultural matters.

The newspaper quotes a spokesman for State Secretary Hugh Faulkner as saying the issue "is under discussion but we have nothing to report at this time."

It also says a spokesman for Gerald Pelletier, communications minister, confirmed that the issue "is under study, but I do not know if it would be included in the throne speech."

The move was first requested three years ago by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission as a way of deterring Canadian advertisers from buying advertising time on U.S. border television stations instead of Canadian stations.

Quebec's Laser Beams Brightly

MONTREAL (CP) — Ian Bruce, president of Performance Sailcraft Inc., keeps getting calls from places like the Harvard Business School.

They want to do case studies on how he found the "hole in the market."

What Bruce has found, with partners Ward McKimm, Andre Julian and Scott Warren, is a 14-foot, 130-pound sailboat called the Laser.

Four years after the Laser emerged on the drawing board, about 26,000 have been produced in operations that centre on a factory in suburban Beaconsfield.

The $855 sailboat is also being manufactured in California, England, Ireland, New Zealand and Australia. Worldwide, more than 240 dealers and agents sell Laser exclusively. Internationally, 1,000 are made each month.

Originally, Bruce and his colleagues thought in terms of the "cottage" market. But things worked out well. They shifted their emphasis and began promoting to sophisticated yachtsmen.

Bruce, 41, plays down the idea of finding a hole in the market. "Our timing was an extraordinary stroke of good luck."

The idea for the boat came from Bruce, who had his own industrial design office here.

He had long felt the need for a Laser-type boat and for two years worked on prototypes. The boat combines characteristics of professional racing craft and beginning-sailor models.

Finally, with another Olympic helmsman, Bruce Kribs, and former Danish sailor Hans Fogh, the plan for the Laser evolved.

Bruce estimates the first Laser cost about $2,000. Mr. Fogh, the sail designer, raced her in America's Teacup Regatta at Chicago, finishing fourth the first time she was in the water.

That evening in March, 1971, Fogh recut the sails and the next day the Laser won. Other prototypes followed, eventually arriving at the present form.

The clamor for orders came soon after that first race and Performance Sailcraft was back-ordered for 700 boats selling at $695 each.

But at the end of August, 1971, the U.S. government slapped a 10-per-cent surcharge on all imports and the company stopped shipping.

The firm was forced to secure $500,000 in loans from shareholders and a bank. "We never had any doubts on the marketability of the boat," Mr. Bruce says.

Based on the boat's worldwide prestige, the firm was soon back in operation, and Mr. Bruce says the major challenge at present is to find better production methods at the same cost.

"I know we could sell the boat for $1,000 but that's just not our philosophy," he said. "Our big goal is to see if we can hold the price at $850 through this year."
